"The Ingersoll watch is bankrupt." This news will bring earnest sympathy to Robert H. and Charles H. Ingersoll. Those brothers employed thousands of workers, paid millions in wages, distributed American goods, and proved American ingenuity, all over the face of the globe. The nation's sympathy and friendship is with them. May the Ingersolls come out of this trouble and build up bigger than ever. The name, at least, will not fail.

The National City, greatest bank in America, will accept small savings accounts, and pay compound interest, 3½ per cent. on five dollars or more. That is good business and good common sense. Those interested in stability are wise to encourage saving.

Every man with a bank account or a piece of real estate is different from the man without either. France has more than six million owners of land in her small population. Those land owners are the backbone of French stability.

When Charles XII. took his small army into Russia, walking through Poland, and through the Russian hordes, as a knife goes through butter, every man that he took with him owned land in Sweden. And every man would die, if necessary, fighting to get back there. Whoever runs the National City Bank is doing other prosperous individuals a favor when he encourages the crowd to find out HOW RAPIDLY MONEY GROWS IF YOU LET IT, at compound interest.

John D. Rockefeller says: "When young, I decided not merely to work for money, but also to let money work for me." He did it, and is very solvent.

In Auburn State Prison lives a fat girl baby named Gloria Odell. She had a little Christmas tree this year, is well and happy, because she is with her mother. That mother helped the father to murder a man that had wronged the mother in her girlhood. The father was executed. The mother is in jail for twenty years.

Next Christmas the girl baby will be out of prison. The law does not allow a child more than two years old to stay in prison, and the little girl's next Christmas will be spent in a public institution. She will not be as fat or as happy next Christmas as she is now. The Christmas after that will be uncertain; the child may spend it in heaven.

The prison baby is not wasting her life. On Christmas Day all the women convicts paraded past her. Some cried; all wished her a Merry Christmas. She may have done as much good on Christmas Day as any free man or woman.

What do you think of the law that will put her in an institution, which is another prison, taking her from the mother that would care for her, better than anyone else?

To sentence a baby to separation from its mother is severe. It could not stay in prison twenty years, of course. Early death, or colorless life in an institution, is the truly "civilized" alternative.

Fred Stone, in his entertaining "Tip-Top," is told that "au revoir" means "good-bye" in French.

"Well," says he, "wood alcohol means good-bye in any language."

That delights the audience, but it is something more than witticism in our prohibition country. Frank Tiffany bought half a pint of "whiskey" on Christmas Day, and divided the half pint with his brother John. Yesterday both were dead. It was "good-bye" for them.

Prohibitionists officially ask newspapers and theatres to suppress jokes referring to prohibition. Will the prohibition directors first make less of a joke of prohibition?

One of the best prohibition jokes is the use of the prohibition club over timid Congressmen, compelling them to forbid doctors prescribing beer for their patients, while allowing whiskey—as much as the doctors choose. Beer is a food, whiskey is a poison. The kind of prohibition that allows whiskey and forbids beer will remain a joke.

"What is courage?" Is it as courageous to ride in the charge at Balaclava, with trumpets blowing and thousands looking on, as to jump into the sea after a friend, with no one looking on?

Howard B. Cross, doctor of the Rockefeller Institute, represents real courage, and will live as a hero, whatever may happen to others.

He went to Mexico to study, and fight yellow fever at Tuxtepec, where fever exists all the year round. Yesterday he died of yellow fever. When he went to do the work there were no bands playing, no uniforms, no medals or high rewards. He knew it was probable that he would die. "Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friend."

So it is written, and dying to help that vague thing, the "human race," requires a very special kind of courage.

That fine fighting Italian, General Diaz, is made "Duke of Victory." The name, taken from a town and commune near Venice, where Diaz broke the Austrian

WEST END DOCTOR IS DETAINED

Two Held by Police to Await Investigation After Officers Visit House

Dr. Clarence Boyle of No. 70 Myrtle street, West End, and John J. Hurley of East Boston are held as suspicious persons by the police of Station 3, following a raid today in which a quantity of narcotic drugs were seized.

The police are investigating a number of notes found in the house and want the doctor to explain about a quantity of jewelry in his possession.

Dr. Boyle, the police say, said he was graduated from Harvard in 1894 and had been a drug addict for four years.

Dr. Boyle's condition was so serious, apparently as a result of the use of drugs, that another doctor was called to Station 3 to treat him.

Special Officers Leonard and Dever seized in the office a quantity of cocaine, several hypodermic needles, an alcohol heater and other apparatus. They also found nine watch chains, five dental tools, four rings, three gold testers and three pairs of silver scissors.

Among memoranda found on the premises which the police are investigating are these:

"In building at corner of Tremont and Washington streets (sic) is box of pearls and diamonds. Have jewelry examined and advertise pearls."

"Get tickets for New York."

Other memoranda told how to gain entrance to a certain building and described the premises and the goods kept there. Another note described the location of the safe at Red Cross headquarters at No. 142 Berkeley street.

Man Convicted of Chevalier Holdup Is Freed

MRS. GRACE CHEVALIER

Frank Seaman, who was found guilty of the Chevalier robbery, was released from State Prison today, but was rearrested on another charge.

Frank Seaman, convicted in April, 1919, of the daring holdup of a Brighton woman in her home and sentenced to State prison for a three and one half to five-year term, was released on parole today. Immediately he was rearrested on a fugitive warrant from Philadelphia, where he is charged with the larceny of a brooch valued at $2,000.

CURLEY IS BALKED BY BOARD

Civil Service Commission Refuses His Request to Keep Jobs From Peters' Men

The Civil Service Commission for the city of Boston today denied Mayor-elect James M. Curley's request to refuse confirmation to any more of Mayor Peters' appointees to public office, and confirmed one and denied one appointment by Peters.

The appointment confirmed by the commission was that of John J. O'Callaghan as chairman of the street commissioners. The appointment denied was that of Edward T. Kelly as city auditor.

In a letter to Mayor-elect Curley, Chairman Payson Dana of the Civil Service Commission stated that the action requested by Curley would not be in harmony with the commission's duty as prescribed by law.

Chairman Dana also said that, upon investigation, the commission did not find any precedent, for the action requested by Curley was created in 1918 by the commissioners then in office.

Curley stated in his letter to the commission that in 1918 the then Civil Service Commission had denied his last minute appointees on the ground that he was about to quit the mayoralty.

The failure of the commission to confirm the appointment of Kelly as auditor came as a shock to City Hall, where he is very popular and where his appointment was looked upon as a deserved promotion.

He entered the assessors' office at City Hall thirty-seven years ago as an office boy and has worked his way up to the position of chairman of the board. He was examined by the Civil Service Commission yesterday and in denying his confirmation today Chairman Dana wrote that Kelly "lacks special training and equipment for the office of auditor."

The position carries an income of approximately $8,500 per year in salary and fees.

John J. O'Callaghan, whose reappointment as chairman of the Street Commissioners was confirmed, was originally appointed from a subordinate position and is well-known. The office carries a salary of $5,000.

MORE SUBS DEMANDED BY FRANCE

Calls for Fleet Three Times as Large as Allowed in Parley Plans

Washington, Dec. 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—France again today presented to the Armament Conference her claim for a submarine tonnage approximately three times as large as contemplated under the American compromise proposal.

The demand by France for a minimum submarine tonnage of ninety thousand tons was declared by delegates to have closed the door to any submarine agreement, the American compromise proposals having been rejected finally and completely by the French.

Casting aside the possibility of harmonizing views on submarine tonnage, the American delegation brought forth a new proposal to limit the size of submarines and other auxiliary craft to a maximum of 10,000 tons.

The presentation of the French viewpoint, based on calculations of her naval experts and reinforced by approval of the French Cabinet meeting yesterday in Paris, was followed by lengthy discussion, the committee adjourning the session after two hours' debate to meet again at 3 o'clock.

Albert Sarraut, head of the French delegation, it was understood, presented with an air of finality the declaration that France could not accept less than 330,000 tons of auxiliary tonnage, in addition to a submarine tonnage of 90,000. The American compromise proposal would have given France about 31,000 tons of submarines.

The British and Japanese delegations are understood to have stated that, in view of the French stand on submarines, they would both feel compelled to reserve action on the tonnage ratio for auxiliary craft allotted Great Britain and Japan under the American plan.

Italian spokesmen expressed regret that France had not seen it clear to accept a smaller tonnage, and Japan declared that the French demands amounted to something which Japan could not hope to sanction under the American proposal.

The French delegation declared adherence to the capital ship ratio agreement, but with the reservation that she desired to begin building replacements in 1927, although this did not mean that she intended placing them in the water before the replacement period provided under the capital agreement.

MRS. McCORMICK IS GRANTED DIVORCE

Less Than Half Hour Required by Court to Award Decree to Rockefeller's Daughter

By International News Service.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, herself one of the wealthiest women in the world, today was granted a divorce from Harold F. McCormick, head of the International Harvester Company.

The decree was granted by Judge Charles A. McDonald in a remarkably brief hearing in less than half an hour after the case was brought into court.

Mrs. McCormick charged desertion. McCormick, in an answer filed almost immediately, admitted not having lived with his wife since May 27, 1918, but denied Mrs. McCormick's specific charge of desertion.

Mrs. McCormick entered the courtroom accompanied by former Judge Charles S. Cutting, her attorney.

McCormick, at the office of the McCormick estate in the Lasalle financial district, declined to comment on the divorce proceedings.

Mr. and Mrs. McCormick have two children, Miss Muriel McCormick and Fowler McCormick.

PELLETIER WINS POINT ON TESTIMONY IN SHUTE CASE

Two star witnesses for Attorney-General J. Weston Allen flatly contradicted each other today in the trial of District Attorney Joseph C. Pellitier for misfeasance, malfeasance and nonfeasance in office before the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

The witnesses were H. H. Patten of Boston and William Powell of Oldtown, Me., both attorneys.

They were testifying in the famous Merrill W. Shute case, which was dragged into the Pelletier trial despite the strenuous objection of Senator James A. Reed, senior counsel for the defence.

In the case Pelletier is charged by Allen with nol prossing an indictment for embezzlement against Shute, a broker, from improper motives.

Counsel for the defense showed today that when Pelletier indicted Shute he did not know civil suits were pending in Maine, interfering with criminal action.

They showed that Pelletier was disgusted when he discovered this and blamed Patten, who was instrumental in getting him to indict, for keeping him in the dark about these suits.

DENIED BY POWELL.

Patten declared that in a conversation he had with Pelletier prior to the indictment of Shute they discussed at least one of these civil suits.

But Powell, who was counsel for Mrs. Emma F. Brackett of Bangor, the woman from whom it is alleged Shute embezzled $15,000, flatly denied this.

He said he was with Patten when the latter talked with Pelletier and Patten said nothing about civil suits.

Later, said Powell, Pelletier discovered such suits existed, became disgusted and did not feel like prosecuting.

Prior to this Attorney Patten, formerly a Bangor man, had himself altered his testimony under a withering cross-fire of questions by Louis C. Boyle, associate counsel in the Pelletier defence.

Various discrepancies between Attorney Patten's testimony today and

He has also directed the superintend of buildings to provide such furniture and equipment for this office as Mr. Curley may desire.

Mayor Peters states in his letter that he wishes to place at the Mayor-elect's disposal any information of city affairs which may be of service to him.

He also suggests that, should Mr. Curley desire to have any legislative bills prepared, he will direct the Law Department to give any assistance needed.

Mr. Curley, it is said, will accept the offer. He is preparing to go away in a day or two with Mrs. Curley on a Southern trip and will be gone until January 10. Most of the time will be spent at Atlantic City with his wife.

ALLEN OPENS NEW BATTLE ON PELLETIER WITH SHUTE CASE

TWO WITNESSES FOR STATE DISAGREE ON STAND

the transcript of his testimony before the Boston Bar Association on the same matter two years ago were revealed by Boyle.

CIVIL SUITS PENDING.

These discrepancies concerned, in the main, civil suits which were pending when the Shute matter was before District Attorney Pelletier.

Attorney Boyle tried to show that Pelletier, after indicting Shute, found out that civil suits were pending against the man and so criminal prosecution would not be proper at that time.

Boyle also showed that Assistant District Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle, who actually procured the indictment against Shute in 1915, for alleged embezzlement of $15,000 from Mrs. Emma Brackett of Bangor, felt the same way about it.

Patten, counsel for Mrs. Brackett, was instrumental in getting Pelletier to indict.

"FOOLED PELLETIER."

"Didn't Lavelle claim you had fooled the district attorney?" Patten was asked.

"He did not use any such words," witness replied.

"Oh, didn't he?" queried Boyle sarcastically. And he produced the Bar Association transcript to show that two years ago Patten said Lavelle said to him, "We feel hurt because we consider we were taken advantage of."

This advantage, it was intimated, consisted in withholding information that civil suits were pending against Shute while trying to get Pelletier to indict.

It was Boyle's first active participation as a cross-questioner. He practises in Washington and is former Attorney-General of Kansas.

Senator Reed tried to get the whole Shute affair excluded from the Pelletier trial on the grounds that these charges against Pelletier were heard by a legislative committee a few years ago and found groundless.

ALLEN INSISTS.

Attorney-General Allen insisted on prosecuting.

In the course of this testimony it developed that Frank B. Hall of Worcester, prominent Republican politician, was Shute's counsel in the case, and that Pelletier on one occasion referred to Hall as a man who "ought to be disbarred."

Prior to the taking up of the Shute case Attorney-General Allen had temporarily closed evidence in the Meyer Berman case.

This was the case in which Berman, former proprietor of the Hotel Higgins in the West End, had testified that he paid Daniel H. Coakley $50,000 in 1916-1917 under threat of criminal indictment.

FAILED TO BRING CHECKS.

Allen had tried to show that Pelletier was concerned in the payment; and that he was guilty of malfeasance, misfeasance and non-feasance in the case.

Samuel E. Berman, son of Meyer, and one of the principal witnesses yesterday did not show up so strongly today, when a demand for certain checks was made upon him.

Yesterday he testified that his share of $35,000 of the alleged $50,000 payment was paid by personal checks, and that the checks and stubs were to be found.

Today he was asked for the checks. He was compelled to admit he did not know where they were.

The first witness of the morning session was Louis Epple, secretary to the licensing board of Boston. He testified to the transfer of the Higgins Hotel license, originally entered in the names of Meyer Berman and Isaac Gordon. The transfer took place on October 20, 1917, and was made to Isaac Gordon alone.

Papers in this transfer were witnessed, according to Epple, by W. Minot Hurd of Daniel H. Coakley's office.

SIGNED BY COAKLEY.

He was followed by Albert S. Nelson, treasurer of the Beacon Trust Company, who testified regarding the note of $15,000 which Meyer Berman is alleged to have given Coakley. The date of the note was July 16, 1917, signed by Meyer Berman, and fell due September 14, 1917.

The guarantee was on a separate form and was signed by D. H. Coakley. On September 14, witness continued, $5,675 was paid, and the balance was turned over the following day. The notation on the note read: "To be paid on maturity." Under objection by Senator Reed, explanations that the note was not to be extended were twice excluded.

Nelson also produced a treasurer's check for $14,350, given to Berman on July 16. It was endorsed by Meyer Berman.

The next case taken up was that concerning Merrill W. Shute, Boston broker, who formerly operated in Bangor, Me.

Three men were sworn as witnesses in this case, but before the first one was called Senator Reed vigorously opposed the introduction of any evidence on this charge on the ground that it had been heard before the Massachusetts Legislature, which found that it had no merit warranting investigation.

He added: "These charges were formally presented to a joint committee of the General Court of Massachusetts in February, 1917. The report of that committee was accepted and approved by the General Court. The report was to the effect that the charges were unfounded and not sustained."

In these circumstances the finding was that the evidence did not warrant investigation.

Reed went on:

"We feel that this matter should not be argued again. We appreciate that it is within the discretion of the court to open the matter, but we feel it should not be done after the matter has had the solemn attention of the General Court."

Attorney-General Allen—"Can counsel inform the government whether testimony was taken before the committee on judiciary?"

Senator Reed—"It was."

PRESSES CHARGE.

Allen—"Was a transcript taken by an official stenographer?"

Reed—"Yes, by an official stenographer of the Superior Court, C. Henry Robbins."

Chief Justice Rugg—"Does the Attorney-General wish to press the charge?"

Allen—"I do."

The first witness was then introduced, Robert G. Dodge of counsel for the Boston Bar Association began prosecution of the case.

Q.—Did you interview Mrs. Brackett and her counsel? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you consult District Attorney Pelletier about it? A.—Yes. I gave him the story as it was told to me by Mrs. Brackett; by Judge Power and by Shute himself.

Q.—Was this information verbal or documentary. A.—Both.

ADMITTED GUILT.

Q.—When was your first interview with Pelletier? A.—It was on December 9, 1915, in Pelletier's office. I told him I had a matter I wanted him to present to the Grand Jury. I told him that William H. Powell and Attorney George E. Thompson had come to my office and explained a matter connected with Shute. They said that Shute had received $15,000 from Mrs. Brackett with which to buy stock; that he had never bought the stock; and that he had confiscated the money.

I told Pelletier that Shute had admitted his guilt in the presence of his counsel, Mr. Hall, Mrs. Shute and myself. Pelletier said that George E. Thompson of Bangor, Me., recently heard of the matter, before any indictment was found.

Q.—Did Pelletier say who Thompson was. A.—A long time before this I brought a letter of introduction to Pelletier from Thompson. He said that Thompson was an old friend of his and a classmate at law school.

Q.—Was there any other conversation with Pelletier about Shute? A.—I told him of my trip with Powell to Holbrook to see Shute. I told him that Shute refused to say much and finally consented to come to Boston. I told him that my next meeting with Shute was in my office in Boston (although formerly of Bangor, Patten is now of Boston), and of my meeting with Shute's counsel, Hall. Shute admitted that he received the money, that he never purchased the stock and that he sent the money for his own use.

LIFE EARNINGS.

At this meeting Hall said he had wanted Shute to make restitution but that he never had. I told Pelletier that we had receipts for the money Mrs. Brackett had sent to Shute, the statement he sent showing his alleged purchases, and we told Pelletier, also, that Shute had admitted that it was all a hoax and that he had confiscated the money.

Shute was connected at this time with Whitney & Elwell. I told him, also, that the woman was ruined financially. I told him the money Shute had stolen represented her life earnings as a school teacher and that she was about seventy-five years old. We talked about the indictment with Pelletier and I said I didn't know why any attorney should want to be heard from before the matter was presented to the Grand Jury.

Pelletier said, "Well, I'll let you go in" (meaning before the Grand Jury). We went before the Grand Jury, but Mrs. Brackett did not testify. An indictment was returned.

TOTAL OF $15,285.

Q.—Prior to the returning of the indictment did you show Pelletier any written evidence of Shute's guilt? A.—I showed him the written statement which I had made showing in detail the extent of Shute's indebtedness and I pointed particularly to the total of $15,285.65.

In answer to questions by Senator Reed, Patten admitted that he had not read the entire statement to Pelletier. The objection of Senator Reed that the paper was a mere memorandum, never seen by Pelletier, was sustained by Chief Justice Rugg, and the paper was excluded.

Attorney Dodge offered a certified copy of Shute's indictment showing that Shute was indicted on thirty-one counts.

The counts charged stealing money and other articles. The docket entry showed that the indictment was brought December 11, 1915, and that Shute was arrested and released in $5,000 bail. It showed that December 17, 1915, the case was continued because a civil suit was pending, and that on December 24, 1916, the indictment was nol prossed.

Attorney Dodge—After the indictment was granted what was your next conversation with Pelletier? A.—I think it was about six weeks after the indictment. I told him over the telephone that I had a letter from Powell, who wanted to know when the Shute case would be tried. He said there would be civil suits pending and that until it was over he could not take the case up.

STRONG LANGUAGE.

He said also: "I don't know that I think it is much of a criminal case." I said: "Shute admitted his guilt in my office, and his attorney, Hall, said that State Prison was staring him in the face unless he made restitution, and possibly even then."

Witness said Pelletier had used strong language in condemning Hall, and himself used the language he ascribed to the Suffolk district attorney.

Witness went on that Pelletier had said Hall ought to be disbarred.

Q.—Was there any talk with reference to a civil suit pending? A.—I think that occurred in my next interview with Pelletier about a week later. Powell, Thompson and myself all went over to see Pelletier. We asked him if he wouldn't try the Shute case. He said "No," that if he'd known there was a civil suit pending he would never have brought the indictment.

I told him that the only civil suit pending that I knew was a small matter over an account with Whitney & Elwell, and that was settled. Powell said there was a small matter still pending in Bangor. Pelletier said: "I can't try the case. You know the court doesn't allow that while a civil case is pending." I said I didn't know anything of the kind. Thompson said it would be using the district attorney's office as a collection agency.

Witness went on—Powell said the civil suit in Maine would be over in a short while and Pelletier said he would try the Shute case as soon as that matter was over.

WOULD FOLLOW SHUTE.

Q.—Was there any other civil suit brought in connection with this case? A.—There was one between my first interview with Pelletier and the indictment of Shute, but it was all settled before the indictment. It was for the purpose of restoring some of Mrs. Brackett's money, and I believe she secured a small sum.

Q.—What else took place during this conversation with Pelletier? A.—He said, "What's wrong with you fellows? What's worrying you fellows is the fact that Walsh & Walsh are appearing for Shute. If anybody thinks that's going to influence me in favor of Shute they are wrong. I have already told Mrs. Shute it would have the opposite effect. I told her that I hadn't spoken to Tom Walsh for a year and that I had no use for Senator Walsh."

Q.—Did Pelletier tell you that he had given Mrs. Shute any advice? A.—He said he had told her she ought to get a real criminal lawyer.

Q.—Was there any talk of Shute's leaving the Commonwealth? A.—I told Pelletier that the bail was small and Shute might "skip." He said if Shute skipped he would follow him, even to South America, if necessary, and would get him if it cost the Commonwealth $100,000.

DELIVERED EXHIBITS

Q.—When did you next see Pelletier? A.—I went over to get the exhibits to be sent to Bangor to be used in a civil action. I saw him then, but had no talk with him. I think it was in the Spring of 1916.

Q.—When did you next see Pelletier? A.—I came to deliver to him the exhibits I had taken. I think it was a few weeks prior to 1917. He made no reference to having nol prossed the case.

Q.—What was your next connection with the case? A.—On February 12, 1917, I received a letter from Powell, saying that the civil matter had been disposed of. I went to see Pelletier at once and asked him if he was now ready to prosecute the Shute case. Pelletier said:

"Oh, I nol prossed that six months ago. I made up my mind it was not much of a case. I decided it was a kind of a love affair between Shute and Mrs. Brackett." I said that Mrs. Brackett was seventy-five years old and Shute was only a boy and their whole correspondence showed nothing but business relations. Pelletier said: "Well, I've nol prossed it." I said: "Then there is nothing more?" Pelletier said: "That's it."

Attorney Patten said he had consulted the dockets in the clerk's office in Superior Court and found the Shute indictment had been nol prossed November 24, 1916, by the district attorney, and that later when he had examined the same docket he found the date had been changed to June 24, 1916.

Senator Reed demanded the introduction of the book, instead of the certified copy, introduced by Dodge.

Senator Reed said that inference given by the counsel for the State was that Pelletier had made such change in the docket when it might have been done by some unknown person. The court allowed the certified copy to stand.

Attorney Dodge stated that they could not connect the change with Pelletier closer than was shown by the certified copy.

Patten was then cross-examined with spirit by former Attorney-General Louis C. Boyle of Kansas.

TRIED TO COLLECT.

Q.—You were employed as counsel to try to collect that money, were you not? A.—Yes.

Q.—You had several conversations with Shute in relation to restitution, did you not? A.—Yes.

Q.—You even tried to get his wife to pay the bill? A.—I didn't. His counsel did.

Q.—This was all done before you saw Pelletier? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had you ever met him before you saw him about the Shute case? A.—Yes, once.

Q.—So after you were unable to collect the money, you appealed to Pelletier for an indictment? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you say that District Attorney Pelletier knew as much about the case as you did before you went to see him? A.—No. He told me Attorney Thompson, a classmate of his, had been to see him before I came and wanted to be heard as counsel for Shute before the case went to the Grand Jury.

Q.—Did Pelletier say to you at that time that he did not want his office used as a collection agency? A.—No.

TESTIMONY DIFFERS.

Q.—Was the matter of civil suits discussed at that time? A.—No. Not until my second interview.

Attorney Boyle than read excerpts from Patten's testimony before the Boston Bar Association, showing that he had discussed civil suits with Pelletier at the first interview. The witness replied that he thought his memory is better now than then, two years ago.

After further reading from the transcript of the Bar Association hearing, he admitted that he was mistaken. The earlier testimony of his showed two civil suits pending when he went to see Pelletier about an indictment.

Q.—Did not Pelletier say to you that he did not wish to take criminal action while civil suits were pending? A.—Yes, I think he may have.

Q.—Didn't he send you to an inspector, with your exhibits and evidence, and wasn't an indictment drawn? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who drew it? A.—Assistant District Attorney Lavelle conducted the proceedings before the Grand Jury.

LAVELLE OBJECTED.

Q.—Didn't the district attorney later call you to account for not telling him about the two civil suits then pending at Bangor? A.—No.

Q.—Was not one of those suits a claim for $25,000 by Mrs. Brackett, covering her entire financial accounting with Shute? A.—No, not to my knowledge.

Q.—You say the district attorney did not say anything to you? A.—Mr. Lavelle mentioned something to the effect that if he had known there were civil suits pending he would not have gone before the grand jury.

Q.—Didn't he claim you had fooled the district attorney, and say they had been overreached A.—No, he did not use any such words.

Q.—Oh, didn't he? Let me refresh your recollection from these records. You testified before the Bar Association that Mr. Lavelle said: "We feel hurt because we consider we were taken advantage of." A.—Well, he may have said that.

WAS SUSPICIOUS.

Q.—Did Pelletier treat you all right? A.—Yes, he was frank.

Q.—Did you feel he was concealing anything? A.—No. He never concealed anything, but I was suspicious

Q.—What made you suspicious? A—The fact that Thompson had been there before me and the excuses he had made about the case.

Q.—You were suspicious because Thompson had seen the District Attorney before you, but did Mr. Thompson or Mr. Pelletier know that you were coming? A.—No. I considered it extraordinary, however, to think that Thompson had been there.

Q.—Can you tell us now why he nol prossed the case? A.—All I can say is that he said it was a love affair between Mrs. Brackett and Shute and that was why she gave him some of her money to invest. He said he did not see much of a criminal nature in it. That it was a civil matter.

WANTED EVIDENCE.

Q.—Isn't that civil suit still pending? A.—Not to my knowledge.

Q.—We will now pick up the question of changing of the records. What is the point of the changing of these records as applied to the trial? A.—I went back to my office after Pelletier had told me he had nol prossed the case six months before and pondered that over. I went back to the courthouse and made a copy of the date of the nol pros, which was November 24, 1916. (This was in January, 1917, while Patten had testified that Pelletier told him that the case was nol prossed "six months ago" or further back than November.) I made a copy and took it back to the office. Then I sent another man to get a copy and after that I sent for a third copy.

Q.—You had no confidence in your own copy? A.—Oh, yes. But I wanted some evidence.

Q.—What did you want the later copies for? A.—To show that Pelletier didn't nol pros the case six months before, as he had said.

DENIES IMPROPER MOTIVE.

Q.—So that when you found it was three months instead of six it was nol prossed you thought something was wrong? A.—I did.

Q.—So you told the General Court or the Legislature that the case had been nol prossed three months when Pelletier said it was nol prossed six months ago? A.—I talked on the case.

Q.—Who asked you to go before the Legislature? A.—Some lawyer connected with the general investigation.

Q.—Was there any suggestion of improper motives other than you have indicated? A.—Oh, no.

Q.—Didn't you testify in direct examination that there was some money hint? A.—I said that Powell had claimed that Shute raised $3,000 on a note.

THOUGHT SOMEONE GOT IT.

Q.—Isn't it the truth that you tried to indicate that the change in the date of the nol pros was made so that the $3,000 loan to Shute was not made at such a time as to throw a suspicion that he got the money about the time of the nol pros? A.—I never thought of that.

Q.—Wasn't there an innuendo that Pelletire got it? A.—I thought that someone got it, and used it to influence Pelletier to nol pros the case.

Q.—When you testified before the Bar Association, didn't you say that Shute raised the $3,000 at about the time of the first entry in the docket? A.—Yes.

In answer to a question by Chief Justice Rugg Senator Reed said it would be the contention of the respondent that the correct date of the nol pros was November 24, 1916, and that the date of June 24, 1916, was an error, perhaps a clerical one.

CORROBORATES PATTEN.

The next witness was Attorney William H. Powell of Oldtown, Me., formerly a probate judge.

He testified that Mrs. Brackett was a sister of his wife and that she was about sixty-eight years old. He started to say that she was a woman of small means when the answer was excluded on objection by Senator Reed.

Powell substantiated much of the testimony of Patten relative to two conversations with Pelletier. In the conversation in January, 1916, he added that he told Pelletier Mrs. Brackett had suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of the Shute embezzlement.

He declared that Pelletier said, "What is wrong with you fellows is that Mrs. Shute has engaged Frank B. Hall of Worcester, of the office of Walsh & Walsh. I told Mrs. Shute that she need have no illusions on that score.

"Since Governor Walsh appointed Dr. Magrath medical examiner I have not spoken to him. As far as his brother is concerned, he is not capable of trying this case, or any other. I know that he got $100,000 in fees while his brother was Governor."

Further testimony on this score was excluded, on objection by Senator Reed.

Q.—In the conversation with Pelletier in January, 1916, was there any reference to Thompson? A.—When I was waiting in the outer room I heard the telephone girl call Thompson on the telephone and ask him if he wanted to be present. From what she said I decided that he said he did not.

Judge William H. Powell was cross-examined by Attorney Boyle.

Q.—You had seen Attorney Thompson at the Parker House on the day you interviewed District Attorney Pelletier on the Shute case? A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew he was in town in connection with another case? A.—Yes.

TRIED TO RECOVER.

Q.—Did you tell that to Pelletier? A.—No.

Q.—The conversation which you overheard on the telephone related to an invitation sent by Pelletier to Thompson to come over and talk about the case while you gentlemen were there, wasn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you, as Mrs. Brackett's counsel, try to recover money from Shute? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long were these negotiations in progress before you talked with Pelletier? A.—They began in November, 1914.

Q.—A year before the indictment? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many times have you personally talked with Shute? A.—Twice I had been writing to him from May to eSptember, 1915.

Q.—Shute had a counter claim against Mrs. Brackett, didn't he? A.—Yes. I learned that at a conference we held at Holbrook, Mass., Shute submitted a statement of expenses which set forth his commissions as broker for Mrs. Brackett and there was a charge of $12,000 which he claimed she had agreed to pay him.

Q.—Did Shute's wife offer to raise the money? A.—She was present. She was quite dazed over the matter.

Q.—Did she suggest that it be settled? A.—Not then. A conference was held later at the office of Frank B. Hall in Boston and she attended that conference.

Q.—Did they offer to raise the money then? A.—They asked for time.

Other organizations to take part in the demonstration include the Amos Lodge, B'nai B'rith; Zionist organizations of New England, Congregation Adath Jeshurn, Roxbury; Temple Beth El, Dorchester; and the Crawford street synagogue, Roxbury.

ELECTION TANGLE UP TO BEVERLY ALDERMAN

The Beverly Board of Aldermen will hold a special meeting tomorrow night to decide whether it has authority to break the seals on the ballots cast at the last city election, which has been contested by William Bursaw, defeated, according to a recount, by three votes in his race with Edward Thompson for alderman-at-large. An attorney for Bursaw appeared at the meeting last night and asked that the board examine the election records and issue his client a certificate of election instead of Thompson. On first returns Bursaw was awarded the election by twenty-three votes.

W. J. CORCORAN WILL NOT OPPOSE PROCEEDINGS TO DISBAR HIM

ESCAPES PROCESS SERVERS

By HARRY A. BENWELL

William J. Corcoran, former district attorney of Middlesex County, who surrendered and was arraigned on fourteen indictments charging blackmail, will fight to the bitter end, according to his counsel, James H. Vahey.

Vahey stated that Corcoran, charged with being head of the blackmail gang whose activities were exposed by the Boston American, would not contest the disbarment charges against him but would defend the criminal cases to the limit.

He added that the former district attorney had been in New York where he fled shortly after his successor, Nathan A. Tufts, was ousted from office by the Supreme Court.

"Corcoran did not go to Mexico or anywhere near there," said Vahey. "As a matter of fact he was at his new home in Port Chester, New York, all the time, with the exception of business trips.

SMUGGLED INTO COURT.

"We have been in touch with the Attorney-General's office at regular intervals, and notified them when Corcoran would be produced. As soon as bail had been arranged we brought him in and he was arraigned. He will be ready to come over here whenever he is wanted for anything. Corcoran will not contest the disbarment cases, but will defend the criminal charges to the limit."

This statement was issued shortly after the burly Corcoran had been smuggled into the courthouse by Vahey and Major Robert G. Crowley, his associate, in a successful attempt to avoid several constables who hoped to serve writs in civil processes on the former Bostonian.

Corcoran was taken upstairs after entering through the Somerset street door of the courthouse and was arraigned after a considerable delay in the lobby of one of the Superior Courts before Judge Bishop.

ESCAPES CONSTABLES.

He waived examination, pleaded not guilty with the right to change his plea within ten days, and was held in $10,000. Bonds were furnished by Walter E. and William H. Goodrich, real estate dealers of Campbello.

Despite the precautions that had been taken, the constables learned the whereabouts of Corcoran, and waited outside the courtroom for his appearance. When the lawyer emerged into the corridor, however, he shot through the crowd, with Vahey and Crowley making interference, and escaped to the street and a waiting taxicab.

Later Constable Belson of the Old South Building, one of those who had missed Corcoran, appeared at Vahey's office, where the latter paid him $78. This sum, Vahey explained, was owed by Corcoran on his State income tax.

During Corcoran's arraignment, Assistant Attorney-General Albert Hurwitz, who is handling the prosecution of the blackmail cases, and Inspector John L. Mitchell, who served the warrant, were present.

In the morning they had performed the same duty in the case of Mrs. Theresa Duggan, who had surrendered at that time. With the arraignment of Mrs. Duggan and Corcoran, there are but three of the ten persons indicted by the Suffolk County Grand Jury in connection with the blackmail gang, who are still at liberty.

One of these is a woman, and of the two men, only one is a figure of importance. It is understood, however, that other indictments will follow, and the names of prominent persons, among them lawyers, have been mentioned.

One woman sought by the attorney general's department is Peggy Purdy, or Peggy Partridge, to use two of her many aliases, the sweetheart of a former State official. Peggy, who adorned the stage while not performing as an alleged siren for the blackmail band, is understood to be but a short distance from Boston, and is expected to be in custody soon.

At one time the little playmate of a well-known professional bicycle rider, Peggy has been friendly with a great many men, and has borne the names of a number. She was at times known as Marie Preston and Mrs. Dann.

TRAPPED CURTIS.

Peggy was first used by the gang, it is charged, to trap the young State official before mentioned, and his infatuation for her is said to be still existent. For a number of years he paid her bills at a Back Bay hotel, it is alleged, and while accepting his money and caresses, Peggy worked for the gang on other jobs.

She took part in the now notorious Curtis case in the Back Bay hotel, being "caught" together with "Teddy" Duggan in a room with the elderly New Hampshire man when the customary raid took place, officials state. Curtis, whose first name seems to be shrouded in mystery, was a victim of heart trouble, and nearly died as a result of the treatment he received at the hands of the gang. He paid $15,000 hush money to them of which the girls, it is said, received but a small amount.

Peggy had been used to lure Curtis to Boston, it is charged, and so successful was she that the gang had no difficulty in plucking him.

IS TALENTED GIRL.

Off and on the young woman returned to the stage, at one time having a part in the "Follies," and later appearing with Leo Ditrichstein's company in "Toto." She is said to possess a fairly good voice, and has little difficulty in obtaining stage employment.

Up until two years ago Peggy Purdy occupied a suite at No. 97 St. Stephen's street, in addition to her apartment in the Back Bay hotel. After going to New York she returned to this city last March, and was again here during the early part of the trial of Nathan A. Tufts.

It was said that her presence in Boston at that time was to obtain money, in which she was apparently successful. The former State official, it is understood, pressed a roll of bills into her hand and urged her to depart for New York and remain there indefinitely.

GIRLS INVOLVED IN BLACKMAIL PLOTS

PEGGY PURDY

First published photograph of the missing girl accused with Theresa Duggan of being a tool of the blackmail ring. Picture was taken when the Purdy girl was the sweetheart of well-known bicycle rider on whose wheel she is posed in photograph. It is charged she lured a man named Curtis to a Back Bay hotel where he was "trapped" by the ring and compelled to pay $15,000 "hush money."

THERESA DUGGAN.

Mrs. Duggan has confessed that she was used by the blackmail ring to lure rich men into compromising positions and she has told Attorney-General Allen the names of her victims and the manner in which they were trapped.

HOME TOWN TO TURN OUT TO GREET DEBS

Republican Mayor of Terre Haute Is Leader of Welcoming Committee

By Associated Press.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 28.—A home town welcome awaited the return tonight of Eugene V. Debs. Friends and neighbors, regardless of their own views of Debs' doctrines, as well as his followers, planned to meet the train and escort him to his home.

Mayor Charles Hunter, Republican, who accepted the chairmanship of a citizens' welcoming committee, declared political significance would be lost "in a socially and neighborly welcome." Leaders of organized labor planned to take part and a call was issued for every workingman to participate.

Nearby towns, particularly in the coal fields, where organized labor is strong, will send delegations.

After a brief address by Debs at the railroad station, a parade will escort him to his home. Mrs. Debs said she would not go to the station, preferring that her reunion with her husband be alone in the privacy of their home.

DYING MAN IN FEUD BLAMES POLICEMEN

North End Rum War Victim Refused Permit to Carry Revolver, He Says

Leo Marangi, dying at the Haymarket Relief Hospital from bullet wounds inflicted as the result of a bootleggers' feud, today charged the police with responsibility for the shooting because they did not furnish him with proper protection.

To newspaper men about his cot, Marangi declared: "Since I was shot at on Dec. 16, many persons, among them policemen of Station 1 and a sergeant from headquarters, came to me and told me that I was marked for death."

Fearing an attack, Marangi said he applied for a permit to carry a revolver and that it was refused. He asked police protection, but it was not given, he asserted.

FOLLOWED FOR WEEKS

"If people went to the officers and told them that I was marked for death," Marangi asked, "why didn't those officers make arrests or take the steps necessary to force from them the names of the persons with whom the threat originated?

"I don't know for sure who shot me, but I do know that it was one of a few. I have been followed for several weeks."

A sister of the dying man who was at his bedside placed the blame of the shooting upon an East Boston gang. Her brother was slain by the same men, she said, who killed Guiseppi DePesola, a liquor trafficker at the corner of Prince and Margaret streets.

BROTHER WAS MURDERED.

Leo Marangi is a brother of Frank Chichi Marangi, who was slain during a bootleggers' battle one year ago

Leo was shot while standing in a pool room on Hanover street. He told the police he was leaning against the window when a man ran down a stairway from an upper floor and fired at him. The assailant then dashed to the street, where an automobile was waiting and escaped.

The police have been furnished with a description of the man who fired the shots and the license number of the automobile. The car was one stolen in New York City last May.

PURCHASE OF LAWRENCE FIRE ENGINE PROBED

Salem, Dec. 28.—The Essex County Grand Jury today reopened the investigation it has been conducting into complaints against members of the Lawrence City Council. Edward F. Kress, member of the firm of E. F. Kress & Sons, carriage builders of Lawrence, was called as a witness to tell of the sale of a piece of fire fighting apparatus to the city last July. The truck was purchased, it is alleged, without a bid as required by law. Fire Chief Francis J. Morris has testified that the purchased the machine and that he acted in an emergency, caused by the condition of the fire department and the city.

DOCTORS TRAP WOMAN IN POISON CASE

Doctors, by Clever Ruse, Locate Deadly Drug in Leon McCaw's Medicine

Bristol, R. I., Dec. 28.—Mrs. Ruth A. McCaw, locked in the Providence County Jail on a charge of poisoning her step-son, Leon McCaw, in one of the strangest cases in Rhode Island's history, was arrested after she had walked straight into a "trap" set for her by two clever physicians.

This was revealed by Dr. William F. Duffy of Bristol, who, with Dr. Thomas W. Grzebein of Providence attended Leon during his recent illness.

Coincident with Dr. Duffy's statement of his knowledge of the case, made exclusively to a reporter for the Boston American, Assistant District Attorney Antonio A. Capotosto announced that orders for the exhumation of the body of Elsie McCaw, a sister of Leon's who died last Spring after an illness remarkably similar to his, will not be issued for at least twenty-four hours.

Mrs. McCaw, who has been on a hunger strike in jail, today broke her fast with a hearty meal, jail officials announced.

SUSPICIOUS SYMPTOMS.

Dr. Duffy declared that the suspicions of himself and Dr. Grzebein were aroused at certain peculiar features of young McCaw's illness. They noticed, for instance, that so long as the lad remained in his home, where he was tended by his stepmother, he was violently ill, being a prey to constant attacks of nausea. On his removal to a hospital, however, he would immediately recover and regain his health.

After a recurrence of this phenomenon, the doctor said, he and his associate decided to make a simple test to see if the dark suspicions they had formed were correct. Before making their test, incidentally, they had a quantity of the contents of the boy's stomach analyzed. The analysis revealed traces of arsenic.

ARSENIC IS FOUND.

"I gave Mrs. McCaw some powders of sugar of milk, with directions to give them to Leon when he felt bad. Dr. Grzebein and I had previously ordered him not to take them, although we had purposely put them in a mild form. Every time his stepmother gave him a powder, Leon poured it into a bottle.

"In all, four ounce bottles were filled with the sugared powder of milk in liquid form. And when we analyzed their contents we found a large quantity of arsenic.

"During this period Leon ate no food prepared in the house. His brother Arthur and I brought his food to him. After keeping him in bed from Monday to Wednesday, we allowed him to get up. This feigning sickness was carried out with no animosity toward Mrs. McCaw, but simply to see if there was anything wrong. We owed it to ourselves for the sake of health and the preservation of life to investigate."

During this period, while the "trap" was being set, the physician added, no one but Mrs. McCaw handled the medicine. After the discovery of the arsenic in the bottles the doctors reported the affair to the authorities, and the woman's arrest followed shortly.

Dr. Duffy then discussed the illness and death of Ethel McCaw. He declined to make any definite deductions, himself. But the similarity between her ailment and that of her brother, as described by the doctor, is startling, the authorities state.

"We don't know, of course, that Ethel did die of arsenic poisoning," he said, "But she showed the same symptoms and her attacks of vomiting and nausea were identically the same as in her brother Leon's case.

"His poisoning was due to arsenic. If the sister died of arsenic poisoning, we will find it there if the body is exhumed.

"Arsenic is metal and will remain in the body.

Elsie McCaw, beautiful in face, but with a body twisted and deformed by an attack of infantile paralysis, suffered in childhood, was seized with the strange attacks of vomiting and nausea last Winter. For months these mysterious attacks, which finally caused her death on April 2, last, baffled the best physicians in the State. Dr. Duffy, who signed her death certificate, wrote in it, "cause undetermined."

Even at that time, he said, he and the attending physicians knew that there was some poisoning influence in her system, but having no reason to suspect anything wrong they concluded that it was due to toxic conditions brought on by her condition of paralysis.

Last March the girl was taken violently ill. Dr. Duffy and Dr. Smith, a Providence specialist, were called. They removed her to the Rhode Island State Hospital for observation. There, as if by magic, she recovered. An X-ray examination showed nothing wrong. She was sent home cured.

She had been home but a short time, Dr. Duffy declared, when she was seized again with the fits of vomiting and nausea. Dr. Grzebein joined Dr. Duffy in the treatment of the girl.

MUST NOT BE HOMELY AFTER ONE PASSES 50

"You have no right to be homely after you have passed fifty," declared the Rev. Dr. E. L. House, in an address today in Park Street Church.

His subject was: "The Face as an Index to Character." He spoke of the pictures in the Hearst papers as giving an insight into the study of faces today. "Young people should not use cosmetics, but older people should use them more," he added. "In Boston streets you see the sensual face the miserly face and the cruel face. Your face reveals your character, when you are trying to conceal what you are inside. Eating has much to do with your face. Then plenty of sleep will show the face off to advantage. Soak yourself in more sleep. Tear off your caouflage and look at yourself in the glass occasionally and find out what your face is telling about you."

LORENZ SAVES LIFE OF PRETTY MARY MOORE

Star of Film With William Faversham Comes From "Valley of Shadow"

By Universal Service.

New York, Dec. 28. — Out of the shadow of death has come beautiful Mary Moore, the "Miracle Woman." In ten days she will leave Broad street hospital as well as ever and without a single mar on her pretty features.

Miss Moore was injured late in November in an automobile accident near Babylon, L. I. For thirty-two days she lingered in the valley of the shadow of death, unconscious. Her skull had been fractured in two places, three vertebrae were dislocated and the second and third cervical vertebrae were fractured.

Her injuries were sufficient to have caused the deaths of a dozen men, noted surgeons who examined her declared.

DR. LORENZ TO RESCUE.

Miss Moore's parents did not know where she was for a week after the accident, during which time she lay on the verge of death in the Long Island home of a friend. She had previously planned to spend several weeks there to study the leading role she was to have taken in "The Silver Fox," a motion picture production. William Faversham was to have been her leading man.

The greatest medical and surgical celebrities in this country attended her. She was removed from the home of her friend to Broad Street Hospital, where pieces of jagged bone were removed from her spine and the vertebrae reset. During these long weeks "the miracle woman" lay unconscious of the heroic efforts to save her life.

Then Dr. Adolf Lorenz arrived from Vienna. He was immediately called in and ordered the film star placed in a plaster cast. First he adjusted one of his famed splints along the injured tract.

For eighteen days she remained rigid in this cast. At no time could she utter a sound or move a muscle. William Faversham and members of the motion picture troupe sent her flowers daily. When they were received she made a tremendous effort to express her gratitude, but could not utter a sound. Only great tears, welling up in her eyes and coursing down her pallid cheeks, told of her appreciation.

ASKS FOR MOTHER.

Finally the Lorenz plaster cast and splint were removed. Miss Moore's neck was in normal condition excepting for a pronounced stiffness. But still she was denied speech and expression. She lay rigid, following her nurses and doctors about with her big eyes.

Then the "miracle" occurred.

Two of her nurses had just finished bathing her. For the first time she seemed to enjoy considerable freedom of her entire body and moved her head from side to side. Then suddenly from the bed came startling words.

"Is mother going to be here today?"

It was Christmas Eve before her mother was told of her miraculous recovery. Mrs. Moore was overcome as she knelt at the bedside and embraced her daughter. "Dinty Moore," as the "Miracle Woman" calls her father, was also there.

And in a week or so beautiful Mary Moore will be out mingling with her friends, perhaps acting again in the movies, back from the shadow of death.

Case of Physician, Detained After Nurse's Death, Is Continued to Jan. 7

On a technical charge of assault lodged in connection with the death Christmas morning of pretty twenty-two year old Grace M. Logue, Dr. Michael M. Stevens, of Pleasant street, Woburn, was arraigned in the Woburn District Court today, and the case against him continued until January 7, to give the State chemists time to complete the analysis of the contents of the dead woman's stomach.

Miss Logue, a nurse employed as an office assistant by Dr. Stevens, and living in his apartment in Woburn, was found dead on her bed from morphine poisoning Sunday morning. Dr. Stevens testified that she had been suffering from a toothache, and that he had administered two doses of morphine. He believes that while dazed by the drug she arose and took a tablet from his medicine chest, not realizing what she was doing.

Medical Examiner Vernon C. Stewart, in his official report to District Attorney Saltonstall of Middlesex County, says that the girl's death probably was caused "by an overdose of morphine, taken while under the influence of medicinal doses given by her physician."

The contents of Miss Logue's stomach have been sent to the laboratory of the Harvard Medical School for analysis.

The funeral took place today in Glenwood [illegible] Ryan of West Medford, a brother-in-law of Miss Logue, had charge of the arrangements.

Meanwhile friends of Dr. Stevens and Mrs. Catherine Stevens, who lives at No. 101 St. James avenue, Back Bay, are wondering if the girl's death will result in bridging the gulf that has separated husband and wife.

SEES PUBLICITY STUNT IN RAID OF BANQUET

Anti-Saloon League Chief Says in Any Event it Helped Prohibition Cause

Arthur J. Davis, State superintendent of the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League, who has been investigating the liquor raid made on the G. O. P. dinner at the Quincy House on December 20, at which Governor Cox was a guest, today declared the raid may have been a publicity stunt for a new dining room opened at the hotel. In any event, he says the raid will be a distinct help to the prohibition cause.

"We see no reason why Director Elmer C. Potter should be subjected to criticism for issuing the permit to transport the liquor in question," said Davis. "According to R L Bridgman, an eye witness, there was drunkenness in a room upstairs and he mentions the name of a State Senator as an illustration. One is moved to inquire whether the prominent guests were the unconscious victims of an adroit advertising scheme.

"According to Bridgman, while Goulston was the nominal principal in issuing the invitations, there are good observers who believe the expense was met by a much better known Boston politician who was in an inconspicuous place on the committee.

"The attempt to convince the public to believe that Mr. Wilson staged the raid in order to embarrass his chief, Mr. Potter, has failed. Mr. Potter says it was Mr. Wilson's duty to enforce the law.

"It is reported that prominent politicians bitterly resent Mr. Wilson's activity and threatened to have him removed. A flood of letters has been sent to Washington indorsing Wilson's courageous action.

"The suggestion that the raid will have an adverse effect on the passage by the Legislature of an effective prohibition enforcement law is not taken seriously by the Anti-Saloon League. Thousands of persons have been convinced that our Federal officers whose duty it is to enforce prohibition in Massachusetts really mean business and that they will really do their duty regardless of political considerations.

"Public officials will do well to watch their steps."

FORCIBLE FEEDING ENDS HUNGER STRIKE

Moscow, Dec. 23 (By the Associated Press).—Marie Spiridonova, the social revolutionist leader, who broke with the Bolsheviki over the Brest-Litovsk treaty, is dangerously ill in the Cheka Hospital as the result of a hunger strike which lasted for fifteen days and was brought to an end through forced feeding. Immediately after Spiridonova's denunciation of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, Count Mierbach, the German Ambassador in Moscow, was murdered and the social revolutionist uprising at Yarrostav and other outbreaks against the Bolshevist authority took place.

ONE IS FREED IN KINGSTON INN MURDER

John Harnish, Escaping Trial on Death Charge, to Be Held as Witness

Plymouth, Dec. 28.—The charge of murder against John Harnish, in connection with the shooting of Edward C. Cardinal at the garage of the Kingston Inn, was dropped today, soon after he, Robert J. Rowland, proprietor of the inn, and James S. Wickham were arraigned before Judge Davis in the Third District Court. Harnish will be detained as a witness.

A new account of Cardinal's version of the shooting was given by Dr. Charles Dudley of Kingston, the first witness for the government. Cardinal, said the doctor, insisted he was shot by two men unknown to him, after Rowland had summoned him to the inn by telephone.

BERNICE LAW PRESENT.

Bernice Law, Rowland's sweetheart, and Mrs. Harnish and her brother were among the spectators.

At the opening of the session Assistant District Attorney William F. Kane moved that, as there was no evidence against Harnish, he be no longer held as a defendant.

Twelve witnesses for the government were then sworn.

Dr. Dudley was the first called to the stand. He testified:

"Rowland and Cardinal called at my office in Kingston on the afternoon of December 8. Rowland said the man with him had been shot while hunting. I asked if it was in the woods and Rowland said 'No, in an auto.' Rowland said he didn't know who the man was. He was greatly excited.

"I'M GOING TO DIE."

"Cardinal was on the floor. He was in great pain. He said nothing for some time. Later he said, 'I'm going to die.'

"Rowland was in the hall outside my office for fifteen minutes. Finally he asked if he could give first aid to Cardinal. Then he leaned over and said to Cardinal, 'Shall I get John?' Cardinal nodded and Rowland left.

"Rowland returned in about ten minutes with Wickham. Rowland asked if he could go to the hospital with Cardinal in the ambulance I had sent to Plymouth for. I told him he could.

"I left my office for a few minutes. When I returned Rowland and Wickham were gone. I went to the Jordan Hospital in Plymouth in my own car. With Dr. Francis Donoghue of Boston and Dr. W. C. Curtin of Plymouth I examined Cardinal. He was very very pale and his pulse was low.

"I WAS HELD UP."

"Cardinal said at this time: 'I believe I am going to die. Give my love to my mother. I am bleeding inside. I was held up in a barn in Kingston. Rowland telephoned to Methuen to me and I came to the inn at Kingston with my chum, Jack Harnish.

"'We were invited into the garage. There, two unknown men told me to hold up my hands. I did, but they shot me. They didn't get my money. There's $300 in my pocket.

"'Jack Harnish had nothing to do with it. Dick Rowland is mixed up in it. Rowland was not one of the holdup men.'"

Dr. Dudley then described the wound which killed Cardinal. He said it was made by a 44-calibre gun.

SOMERVILLE MEN HURT IN CAMBRIDGE TUNNEL

Robert J. Burns, forty-two years old, of Bellevue terrace, and Edward Haynes, sixty years old, of Beacon street, both in Somerville, were severely bruised today while making repairs to the cable in the Cambridge tunnel which recently burned out and tied up traffic. They were working on a flat car on which was a heavy reel of new cable. When near the Summer street station the cable fell from the car and pinned them to the wall. They were rescued by fellow workmen and taken to the Relief Hospital.

MAN CONVICTED OF CHEVALIER HOLDUP FREED

Seaman Sentenced for Gem Robbery Is Paroled and Then Rearrested

with Mrs. Grace Chevalier of Walbridge street, Brighton, daughter of the late Richard Canfield, the gambling king, on September 27, 1918, on a train from New York to Boston. Although she gave him a fictitous name and address he followed her to her home and it was there the holdup took place. While Seaman pointed a gun at Mrs. Chevalier, a Confederate he had procured rifled her traveling bag and took jewelry worth $8,500. The two men then locked the woman in a clothes closet, where she remained several hours until rescued by neighbors, who heard her pounding on the closet door.

When rearrested Seaman was arraigned in Municipal Court and remanded to jail to await the arrival of Philadelphia officers.

PACIFIC TREATY IS ATTACKED BY BORAH

Believes Agreement With Japan and England Endangers Monroe Doctrine

Washington, Dec. 28.—Members of the United States Senate who are determined that the plan of Secretary Hughes to [illegible] an alliance with Great Britain and Japan, to [illegible] be blocked are finding many new pitfalls for this country in the four-power Pacific treaty.

For one thing, Senator Borah of Idaho said today the four-power treaty would destroy the Monroe Doctrine. It would, he declared, destroy the power of the United States to protect the west coast of Mexico and South America against Japanese colonization, such as was attempted a few years ago at Magdalena Bay.

Discussing the danger to the Monroe Doctrine, which would be brought about by inclusion of the United States in the four-power alliance, Senator Borah said:

"The Monroe Doctrine is nothing but the doctrine of self-defence. But the moment the United States is compelled to submit to the alliance questions, which heretofore have been settled by the United States alone under the Monroe Doctrine, that moment the doctrine itself is destroyed and becomes nothing.

"Under the Monroe Doctrine we can tell Japan or any other country to keep away from our west coast, as we have done in several instances, whereas under the treaty we would be deprived of our right to do this.

"If the other parties to the alliance did not support us we would be obliged to use force to carry out our demands.

"We could do this under the Monroe Doctrine as it now stands, consequently our position will be stronger if we do not go into the treaty than if we do and submit to having the Monroe Doctrine destroyed."

MELROSE NEIGHBOR HOLDS LOUD IN HIGH ESTEEM

Relative by marriage of alleged murderer who declares she will be only too happy to tell all she knows regarding his affairs if it will benefit his case

MRS. KATE DOW

MRS. DOW EAGER TO AID LOUD AT TRIAL

Ready to Take Stand if She Can Clear Man Accused of Killing Policeman

By HAZEL CANNING

"I don't know whether or not I shall be called as a witness. If I am called, I shall be most happy to testify to all the truth I know. For any of us all would do everything in our power to help Clarence Loud."

So speaks Mrs. Kate Dow, Melrose woman, friend of Clarence Loud, accused of the murder of Patrolman James Arthur Preston of Wakefield. Mrs. Dow is wife of Loud's cousin, and was always on intimate terms with the Loud family.

While Mrs. Dow so voices her wish to help, if she can, Mrs. Caroline Loud, the aged mother of the accused salesman, speaks up, in heartfelt loyalty, voicing absolute confidence in the outcome of the trial, now so very near.

WAITING ONLY HARDSHIP.

"We none of us fear that Clarence will not be acquitted," said she, at the home of her son, No. 93 Stratford road. "We know very well that my son will be home with us all very soon now.

"The only hardship is the waiting."

That, briefly, is the atmosphere which hovers about the two homes, in Melrose, the Loud home, on Stratford road, and the Dow home on Rowe street—an air of waiting, painful, eager, aching waiting, for a happy event, which everybody knows is due to come, after a trial in Cambridge. As Mrs. Dow explained:

"Mr. Loud is a cousin of my husband, and his family and my family have been best of friends and neighbors for ever so long. Naturally, this trouble has come home to us, almost as keenly as it has to the Loud family. We honor and love and esteem Clarence Loud. I know him for the upright, likeable chap he is. Therefore, if, in any way, any testimony is needed, I, of course, will be only too happy to furnish it.

HOPEFUL OF OUTCOME.

"But, as yet, anyway, I have received no news that I would be called. During this period of waiting we have kept in close touch with Mr. Loud, and tried to do what we could. We are all so anxious and wishful for the trial to be over. And so very hopeful of the outcome. We just wish we could do more than we can do. But, very soon now, we shall hope for the best news in the world."

So speaks the woman who, a few hours before Preston was killed, was, according to her own account, riding in Loud's sedan.

In the meantime, at the Loud residence, there is one old lady, the most loyal woman in Melrose, who goes on about her work singing, no doubt in her heart. She is the man's mother. And she speaks, about like this:

"No, I'm not fretting, my dear. I'm an old lady now. And in my long life I've always found that the worst troubles of all are the ones which never happen.

DON'T BORROW TROUBLE.

"I don't borrow trouble, especially when I know there's no real trouble to borrow. You see, it's just this way with me. Clarence is my only child, and my only son, born to me late in life after I never expected to have a child at all, let alone a son.

"Now, if there's one woman in the world who knows just about what kind of a man her son is, it's the woman whose son came to her, a miracle, when she had ceased to hope for him. So I am the woman who knows, in her heart, that never—never—never could my boy have done what he is charged with doing. Let the guilty tremble. In my long years I have seen right prevail, so very often, that I have faith it does, always, in the end.

"Right—justice—are the two things you can't kill, nor trample on, nor change. They stand, changeless, forever. And they are as potent to heal the heart of an old lady like me, yearning over her son, as they are to change the fate of nations.

CELEBRATED CHRISTMAS.

"So, this Christmas season, everyone in this house has just gone on celebrating Christmas just as though our dear one had been here to share it with us. We have made him presents, out of our great love for him.

"Many of these he has little use for now, where he is. But there's one kind of present which he appreciated, I can tell you. That is the roast chicken and goose we took him.

"My son has had good home cooking sent to him ever since he was confined. We all of us here, Mrs. Loud, his wife, and I, his mother, did our share of that.

FRIENDS ARE LOYAL.

"It is sad to be away from your home at Christmas time. But the joy in all that has come to us, of pain and heartache, since my son went out of this house for a while, is the loyal rallying about us of all our friends. If you could have seen all the presents and cards sent by the people outside the family to Mr. Loud it would warm your heart. So has it ours, and cheered us with great joy until the time when all is over and our dear one comes home again, the ordeal ended."

SOCIAL WORKER REPRIMANDED BY COURT

Judge Ahern Warns Woman Not to Attempt to Influence Judge

Elizabeth Mooney, social worker and representative of the Family Welfare Society, and in charge of the society's branch office at Roxbury Crossing, was warned by Judge Ahern in the Roxbury District court today not to attempt to influence a judge in a case pending before him, and to be more careful in her comments on court procedure in the future.

The warning followed a telephone conversation some days ago in which Miss Mooney called up Judge Ahern and attempted to testify in a case then pending before the judge in which a man was charged with failure to provide.

Judge Ahern told the social worker she would have to come to court to testify. She said her society would not permit that, and complained that Judge Ahern was "not giving the society the proper support in its work."

Judge Ahern hung up, but wrote a letter to Stockton Raymond, secretary of the society, asking that he come to the court, accompanied by Miss Mooney.

Both Secretary Raymond and Miss Mooney were in court today, and Judge Ahern explained the criminal aspects of an attempt to influence a jurist and also contempt of court.

When he had finished, he demanded an apology from Miss Mooney, which she made him.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS HASN'T $100,000

Washington, Dec. 28.—"Doug" Fairbanks hasn't $100,000 in his name. I dont' think he had $50,000 up to the time he put on "The Three Muskateers." John Emerson who directed "Doug" in the latter production gave this information to the Senate Finance Committee conducting a hearing on the tariff. "He borrowed $750,000 to put on "The Three Muskateers," added Emerson who declared there was not three stars in the industry who were overpaid. Talk of fabulous salaries of stars is only for the consumption of the public, Emerson said.

Every Article Advertised is at a Reduced Price
Every Article Is Reduced From Our Own Recent Price or Has Just Been Purchased at a Big Concession From the Manufacturer

It was necessary to use smaller type than usual in order to crowd in as many lots as possible. But this arrangement will be found convenient for those who use clippings from these pages as their shopping lists.

Our December business is running larger than even last year's big volume. Hence in many departments where stocks were depleted the heads of those departments succeeded in purchasing manufacturers' "last-of-the-season" lots at manufacturers' clearance prices.

As our merchandising system insures an efficient check on the quality of goods we buy; as we are interested in buying and selling only dependable goods, and as our prices represent such big values that we do not find it necessary to advertise former prices—it is clear that the crowds that attend this annual clearance come here because it so strikingly is one of the greatest money saving events of the year in New England.

Note I—As this is a clearance, every sale, of course, must be considered final.

Note II—If you are a charge customer, you will save time by bringing your identification coin.

Note III—All items advertised were in stock when this advertisement was first sent to the newspapers. But some lots may be sold out early. Quantities are approximated.

Note IV—Mail and telephone orders filled if the goods are in stock when order is received.

Note V—Following our usual custom, all charge purchases made before Dec. 31 will go on January bill, rendered February 1.

SIR JOHN HARE, NOTED ENGLISH ACTOR, DEAD

Widely Known Among Americans, Having Played Here in Several Productions

London, Dec. 28. (By the Associated Press.)—The death of Sir John Hare, noted English actor and manager was announced today. He was 77 years old.

Sir John Hare was widely known to American playgoers through his several visits to the United States, beginning in [illegible].

He appeared in this country in numerous plays of his extensive repertoire, notably "Caste" and "The Gay Lord Quex."

Making his first appearance on the stage at Liverpool in 1864, he shortly went to London and was associated with Mr. and Mrs. Kendall at the St. James Theatre from 1879 to 1888, establishing his popularity in important character parts. He became manager of the Garrick Theatre in 1889, producing there several successful plays, among them some of Pinero's best known works.

He took the Globe Theatre in 1897, where his production of "The Gay Lord Quex" was a pronounced success.

In 1907 he was engaged by Charles Frohman to play Napoleon in "The Great Conspiracy."

Sugar Prices Break to Lowest Levels in Years

By Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 28.—The lowest level recorded in the raw sugar market in ten years was reached today, with a further decline of 1-16 cent a pound in the price of old crop Cubas. Sales were made on the basis of 1 13-16 cents.

Renewed pressure later in the day dropped raw sugar another 1-16th cent to a basis of 1¾ cents a pound for Cubas, cost and freight, the lowest level recorded here in more than fifteen years.

Refined sugar broke below the five-cent level today for the first time in several years, due to the continued weakness of raw sugar. The Federal Sugar Refining Company reduced its quotations ten points to 4.90 cents a pound for fine granulated.

THREE BURNED IN $3,000 FIRE IN BROOKLINE

Cigarette Stub Believed to Have Endangered Occupants of Apartment House

Three persons suffered burns and five other narrowly escaped with their lives when fire today damaged an apartment house at No. 94 Pleasant street, Brookline, to the extent of about $3,000.

Mrs. Arnold C. Heath, who occupies the top apartment, was badly burned about the body. Roswell C. Colt, of New York, said to be a relative of Mrs. Heath, also was burned about the body. Miss Margaret Gray, who occupies the apartment with Mrs. Health, was slightly burned.

Two persons made a spectacular escape by crawling out of a window and swinging over to a piazza. The fire is believed to have been caused by a cigarette stub.

The middle apartment, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George Crawford, and the lower one, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Alberts, their baby and Benjamin Lipow, were filled with smoke. All, however, escaped in their nightclothes.

Arthur J. Caulfield is agent for the property.

DEATH OF MAN TIES UP NEW YORK SUBWAY LINE

New York, Dec. 28.—The Broadway-Seventh avenue line was tied up for half an hour today after an unidentified man either jumped or fell to his death before a train at the 191st street station. Crowds looked on as the coach was jacked up for removal of the body. The dead man was about forty years old.

SAYS GERMANY CANNOT MEET OBLIGATIONS

Hamburg Chamber Calls for Revision of the Treaty of Versailles

Hamburg, Dec. 28—(By the Associated Press.)—The efforts of Germany during 1921 to fulfill her peace obligations have failed, and it is idle to think that any political or economic efforts will now succeed unless these obligations are modified, declares the annual report of the Hamburg Chamber of Commerce, issued today.

"Those who still believe the London ultimatum can be carried out," says the report, "either are without judgment or do not desire fulfillment but the destruction of Germany, which in time would react on France, England and America."

The report asserts a way out of the dilemma could be found by a very simple means, as follows: Revision of the treaty of Versailles and of the London agreements to a reasonable basis, making it possible for Germany to secure foreign credits; a conference of issuing banks of interested nations for the regulation of German exchange and the restitution of the German colonies, or, at least, a German mandate over these colonies.

The report expresses slight faith in the speedy return of world economic normality and criticizes the American policy toward shipping in general and toward German shipping in particular.

"The outlook for American merchant shipping is unfavorable," continues the report. "Only 400 of the 1,464 Shipping Board steamers are being employed. German ships in American ports are still in an extraordinary position, despite resumption of friendly relations, which could be justified only if American ships in German ports were compelled to pay considerable fees."

Trade, which was dull at the beginning of the year, improved as the mark depreciated in price, but declined somewhat toward the close of the year.

PROTEST LOSS OF LEVIATHAN AT NAVY YARD

Employes Will Stage Mass Meeting at Faneuil Hall Tomorrow Night

The employes of the Charlestown Navy Yard are up in arms against the decision of United States Shipping Board and the Navy Department in not permitting the yard to estimate on the work of reconditioning the steamship Leviathan.

There will be a mass meeting at Faneuil Hall tomorrow night to protest against the decision of the Federal government officials. The job means employment of 3,000 men for at least a year.

When estimates were asked for a year ago the local navy yard's figures for the work were $8,938,000. The bid of the Todd Shipbuilding Company of New York was $10,740,000, or $1,802,000 higher than the navy yard estimate.

On the ground that the navy yard could not guarantee to complete the work within the prescribed time nor guarantee a penalty forfeit for delay, the estimate of the yard was thrown out. Amended specifications were drawn up and navy yards were denied permission to furnish estimates, but the Todd company has been allowed to submit a modified bid.

The local navy yard has a record of never having exceeded an appropriation for building or repair work. There the Bridge, a big auxiliary war vessel, was built during the World War and $24,000 of the appropriation returned. The George Washington was repaired at the local navy yard within the time limit and with a return of $25,000. The America was repaired there within the time and money limits, and the Mount Vernon was reconditioned by the Charlestown workmen well within the time limit and with a saving of $7[illegible] of the appropriation.

The meeting tomorrow night will be under the auspices of the Charlestown Metal Trades Council. Its membership is comprised of navy yard workmen. Mayor Peters will preside. There will be music by the Navy Yard Band. Other speakers will be John N. Cole, Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Works, representing the State; Martin Joyce, representing the State Committee to Promote Employment; Major James T. Duane, commander American Legion; Frank S. Davis, Maritime Association, Boston Chamber of Commerce; Congressmen George Holden Tinkham, Peter F. Tague and James A. Gallivan.

LAWRENCE WANDERER PICKED UP IN WALTHAM

Michael Holopitas is only eight years old and lives with his father, John Holopitas, and his mother on Hampshire street, Lawrence, but he was not a bit alarmed when the driver who had offered him a ride on a truck in Lawrence and carried him to Marlboro, went away and left him stranded in the latter town. Michael merely hopped on another truck and journeyed on until he arrived in Waltham, where the police took him to a nice warm bed in the police station. Today he is waiting for the coming of his father, who has been notified.

Phone Girl Hears Shots and Effects Capture of Woman Slayer

By International News Service.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 28.—Screams and shots heard over the wire by a telephone operator today led to instant police investigation into the slaying of her husband by Mrs. J. G. Simmons at their home here.

The operator, Miss Martha Connerning, was completing a long distance connection with Louisville, Ky., to notify Mrs. Simmons that her father was dying in that city. At the instant that the circuit was completed the operator heard the screams and shots and notified policemen, who immediately rushed to the Simmons home, but the man was dead.

Mrs. Simmons was arrested on a charge of murder. In her confession to the police she is reported to have declared Simmons, an overseas war veteran, was attempting to attack her.

Meantime he is making money singing popular songs and passing the hat among the officers and civilians gathered in the station guard room.

NORTH DONEGAL ASKS APPROVAL OF TREATY

Will Regard Opposition to Pact as Betrayal of Country's Interests

Belfast, Dec. 28 (By the Associated Press).—A convention of Sinn Fein clubs of North Donegal, held at Buncrana, has adopted a resolution by unanimous vote expressing satisfaction with the Irish Peace Treaty as embodying the essential of Ireland's freedom and safeguarding Ireland's honor.

Reports submitted before the vote showed that each district in the constituency favored ratification of the pact.

The resolution called upon the six Dail Eireann members representing the district not only to vote for the treaty, but to use their influence to bring about ratification. Failure to do this, the resolution stated, would be regarded as betrayal of the best interests of the country and gross contempt for the opinions of their constituents.

Donegal, although the most northern Irish county, is under the Southern Parliament, being one of the three counties excluded from Ulster under the government of Ireland bill of 1920.

Navan, County Meath, Ire., Dec. 28.—The Urban Council of Navan has adopted a resolution favoring ratification of the Anglo-Irish Peace Treaty.

FIGHT ON FILM TARIFF IS OPENED

Experts Declare Tax on Imported Goods Would Tend to Produce Monopoly

Washington, Dec. 28.—The proposal in the Fordney tariff bill to levy a tariff on imported films was attacked by witnesses appearing before the Senate finance committee.

William A. Deford of New York and Granville S. MacFarland of Boston, on behalf of the International Film Service, told the committee that imposition of tariff would confer an absolute monopoly upon the Eastman Company and would place American film users at the complete mercy of that concern.

TO FIGHT MONOPOLY.

The Eastman Company, the committee was informed, manufactures about 95 per cent. of the motion picture film used in the United States, the total consumption in this country being 800,000,000 linear feet a year. They asked that the small amount which is imported be allowed to come into the country free of duty as a means of combatting the attempted monopoly.

"The Eastman Company has fixed a profiteer's price on their films," Mr. Deford said to the committee. "It should not be permitted to have a monopoly, which would be created by this proposed tariff. If they are they will have the entire film industry in their grip, and higher prices will have to be paid by all users of film."

NO REVENUE POSSIBLE.

Mr. MacFarland said it costs the Eastman Company one cent a foot to put out the sensitized film, and that the proposed duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on such film would be equivalent to two and one-half cents a foot, thereby making importations impossible. He said the protection to labor under the proposed tariff would be insignificant and that the revenue to the government would be nothing because there would be no importations at all.

Saul Rogers, representing the Fox Film Company, gave similar testimony. He opposed the tariff on developed films as well as that proposed to be levied on sensitized films. He was particularly severe in his criticism of the Eastman Company and declared the sole result of the imposition of the tariff would be to give that concern a monopoly of the American business.

Drawn to give himself up to the police by continued contemplation of a photograph of his three-year-old daughter, Charles Verity, 31 years old, of No. 35 Bulfinch street, Lynn, will appear in the Lynn court today to answer a charge of violating his parole.

Verity is being brought back from Providence, where he surrendered himself. He is wanted in Lynn as a result of his abrupt departure nearly two years ago, while he was on probation on charges of larceny and desertion. He forged his wife's name to a $300 check when he left, it is asserted.

$100,000,000 U. S. TOY BILL RUN UP IN 1921

New York, Dec. 28.—More than $100,000,000 was spent by the American people for toys and games during 1921, the National City Bank has figured. The factory value of toys manufactured in this country has more than trebled, it was estimated, since the war cut off the supply from Germany, chief source of America's toy imports.

PICTURES—MORE PICTURES

The appeal of the news pictures in the Boston Daily Advertiser is from many angles. Straight news people and events; pretty bathing girls from the Coast; famous—or infamous people in the daily progress of the world; then the "Comics" and the Cartoons. A great Pictorial.

TELLS AUTOISTS TO LOOK OUT FOR SLEDS

Goodwin Aroused by Public Officials Failing to Protect Children

Warning autoists to exercise care and branding as "little short of criminal" the failure to provide protection for child coasters, State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today scathingly arraigned public officials who show such little regard for the lives of the children.

Goodwin made his attack after the death of Arvi Ala, seven years old, of Gloucester. The young coaster was killed in a collision between the sled and an auto bus.

"The number of accidents being reported between autoists and children coasting has become alarming," said Registrar Goodwin.

"It is little short of criminal for local authorities to legalize coasting on streets or traveled thoroughfares without making provision to protect the lives of children.

"Nor is the responsibility all with the local authorities. A great deal rests on the shoulders of motorists. No person operating a car should cross an intersecting street without slowing down at a point where there is the slightest grade, especially at a time when there may be children coasting there."

PREDICTS LAKE LOUISE WILL SLOWLY DISAPPEAR

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 28.—A prediction that Lake Louise, magnet of tourists to Western Canada, would eventually disappear, as deposits gradually filled the basin, was made today before the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science by W. A. Johnston of the Geological Survey, Ottawa.

Big Demand for Toys

It is figured by the National City Bank that expenditures for toys in this country in 1921 exceeded $100,000,000.

Annual Clearance Sale

QUALITY The great feature of this Annual Clearance Sale is the quality of the goods offered. And it is true this year, as it has been always, that nothing is offered in these sales that is not good enough for our regular stock. Indeed, most of the goods are regular goods which we mark down to clear our stock at the end of the season.

ECONOMY We believe that there is real economy in purchasing goods of such quality that they continue to give satisfaction after long use. That is true when goods are sold at regular prices. It is all the more true when they are marked at prices to effect immediate clearance.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Boston Folk Included in Bermuda Winter Colony

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE season at Bermuda is now well under way.

Hotels and cottages already boast of a goodly showing of arrivals, and altogether the season promises to number among the gayest ever. Golf enthusiasts were delighted to learn that two eighteen-hole courses are under construction, one of which is nearly ready for play.

Included in the Winter colony at that popular island are many Americans and among the latter group Mrs. Charles Sumner Hamlin and her daughter, Miss Anna Hamlin, are of the most prominent.

The Hamlins have for many years made their home in Washington and Boston, as well as maintaining a Summer estate in Massachusetts at Mattapoisett. Both at the capital and in the Hub the Hamlins have numbered among the leaders of the smart set. Mr. Hamlin, besides holding memberships in the most exclusive clubs of Washington, is inscribed upon the scroll of the Somerset Club here, while Mrs. Hamlin (Huybertie Lansing Pruyn), a Colonial Dame, belongs to the Chilton Club. Anna Hamlin, the daughter of the house, claims memberships in the Sewing Circle of 1918-1919, as well as in the Vincent and Chilton Clubs.

But to get back to Bermuda again. The Princess Hotel held its opening ball last week, several important dinner parties preceding the dance, one of them being the dinner which Mrs. Hamlin gave in honor of her daughter.

I recall that several years ago this charming young girl created quite a furore by having the honor to entertain the youthful Prince Leopold of Belgium, heir to the Belgium throne. It seems that Anna knew both Mayor and Mrs. Peters very well, had, in fact, known them both for years. Thus when the Prince paid a visit to Boston back in October, 1919, Mayor Peters thought of his attractive little friend, and arranged that she—properly chaperoned, of course—should show the royal visitor about the city in general, and Harvard College in particular. Which Miss Hamlin did, thereby becoming known as the only girl in America to play hostess to Belgium's very nice young Crown Prince.

Naturally enough the pleasant little hostess could not escape being interviewed, following her "princely" trip about Cambridge. I recall that in these interviews Miss Hamlin stated, upon being asked innumerable questions as to what the Prince thought about American girls—that he never mentioned them; that, in fact, he hardly seemed to notice them.

Last Summer, while visiting with friends in Bar Harbor, Me., Miss Hamlin was taken seriously ill. For a time her host of friends were quite alarmed, but it was not long before Miss Hamlin was convalescing comfortably at her parents' Summer home at Mattapoisett.

The Hamlins have given up their home in Washington. While Mrs. Hamlin and her daughter are in Bermuda Mr. Hamlin is staying in Washington at the Cosmos Club.

Boston society may lay particular claim to the ball which Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh gave at the capital in honor of the Princess Bertha Cantacuzene, the debutante granddaughter of Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant of Washington, with whom the Princess and her parents, Prince and Princess Cantacuzene-Speransky of Russia, are passing the Winter.

The affair, which was proclaimed to be the largest and most brilliant ball of the season, was attended by over 500 guests, drawn from the ranks of the highest notables of the capital.

The Russian-American bud wore a gown of white satin, made in the model of 1830, with real crinolined skirt that came almost to the ankles, and the straight decolletage. This quaint frock was finished in a flounce and bertha of beautiful old lace, while the only ornaments worn were long earrings of pearls. A shower bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses completed the costume.

Preceding the ball Mrs. Grant gave a dinner for young persons, which was chaperoned by her grandson and his bride, Prince and Princess Michael Cantacuzene, who came on from New York for the event. The young Princess, as everyone knows, of course, only last June was Clarissa Curtis of Beacon street and Nahant. Her marriage to the Prince late in June was one of the smartest nuptial events which Boston has ever seen, and naturally, the entire social "Who's Who" turned out for the occasion. The bridegroom's sister, Princess Bertha, was maid of honor at the wedding, when everyone present proclaimed her a very charming and pretty young woman.

An unconventional pose of Miss Anna Hamlin, who is well known among members of Boston and Washington society. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Hamlin, who have a Summer estate at Mattapoisett. Miss Hamlin is spending the Winter in Bermuda with her mother.

Random Notes of Society Folk in Town and County

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE B. DE FOREST, who have been at the Muenchinger King in Newport, R. I., since the latter part of September, have left there to spend a week in Boston before going on to New York for the remainder of the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Prince, Jr., formerly of Boston, who are spending the Winter in New York, were among the society folk who entertained guests at Sherry's on Monday evening. The occasion was the second of the fetes for the benefit of the Big Sisters, a series of entertainments arranged by Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt. There will be two more fetes on the nights of January 2 and 9.

The Newport Country Club, besides the 4.38 acres of land taken over from the King estate, the deed for which has been filed for record at the City Hall, has taken over about forty more acres of adjoining land which will be used for the enlarging and improvement of the club's golf course.

The engagement of Theodore Babbitt, at present in the Harvard Law School, to Miss Margaret Crossette Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Fisher of Park avenue, New York, has been announced. Mr. Babbitt, also of New York, is the son of the late Kurnal R. Babbitt and Mrs. Babbitt. He graduated from Yale in 1918. His fiancee attended the Porter School in Farmington, Ct.

CAMBRIDGE MAN ACCUSED BY THREE OF LARCENY

Wesley H. Murray of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, president of the International Investigation Service Company of Boylston street, Boston, was arrested today on a warrant by Inspector Conway on charges of larceny of $555 by false pretences. Michael J. Fitzgerald of Webster street, Allston; John K. Flemming of Stratford street, East Dedham, and Thomas E. Twitchell of Robbins street, Dorchester, made the complaints. They alleged they were induced to deposit money with Murray to become directors in his concern and that they have received no benefit therefrom. Before Judge Dowd in Municipal Court Murray was held in $1,000 for a week.

GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL REJECTS G. H. WRENN

The Governor's Council today, for the third time, refused to confirm the reappointment of George H. Wrenn of Springfield as a member of the State Board of Parole. Governor Cox then withdrew Wrenn's name and appointed Dr. Hugo O. Peterson of Worcester, a prominent Republican, to the post.

Wrenn was appointed in 1919 by former Governor Coolidge. He is former president of the Massachusetts branch, American Federation of Labor, and was candidate of the Socialist party for Governor of Massachusetts. Governor Cox appointed Bert E. Holland of Jamaica Plain as special justice of the Roxbury District Court to succeed Judge William P. Meehan.

CHAMBER RAPS CITY GARBAGE CONTRACT

Long-Term Contract Called "Financial Folly" With Lower Costs in Sight

Declaring that it would be "financial folly" for the city of Boston to commit itself at this time to a long-term contract such as is contained in the ten-year clause attached to the now famous garbage disposal deal which has been approved by Mayor Peters, officials of the local Chamber of Commerce have sent to the Mayor and Councilmen a communication urging that the deal be rejected.

In taking this step the Chamber is aligning itself squarely with Mayor-elect James M. Curley, who sought, unsuccessfully, to secure a temporary court order to restrain the city from entering into the contract.

The communication asserts that the price of $345,000 a year for a ten-year period does not make allowance for better conditions which will appear with the passing of abnormal business conditions. It closes by urging that the present deal be dropped and that a competent engineer be retained to make a comprehensive survey of the situation and to make a detailed report on his findings.

4,000 JOBLESS MAY BE NIGHT WATCHMEN

Philadelphia, Dec. 28.—A plan to use 4,000 unemployed men in the city as night watchmen, their wages to be paid by contributions of 15 cents weekly by each family in the territory they are to guard, has been suggested to the unemployment committee by Mayor Moore.

DR. WOODWARD OFFERS CITY AID IN DRUG DRIVE

Deplores Division of Responsibility Among Authorities in Fighting Narcotic Evil

Co-operation between Federal, State and city authorities in enforcing the narcotic laws is offered by Dr. William C. Woodward, health commissioner of Boston, in the drive to stamp out the fast-growing drug evil in Boston and New England.

The local health commissioner deplored the lack of centralization of responsibility for throttling the drug traffic.

"Where there is a great division of responsibility," he declared, "there is a danger of the job being neglected."

And with all the laws on the subject, he said, the Boston Board of Health is not charged with enforcing any of them. It was his opinion that local boards of health would be able to help stem the drug traffic had they the authority to do so.

"We have State laws requiring the registration of doctors, and local police forces are charged with arresting persons peddling drugs illicitly, or illegally possessing narcotics.

"Then the Federal government has its force of men in the Internal Revenue Department to enforce the Harrison Act, and there are the customs officers. This Harrison law was represented as the remedy for the drug evil. Has it met the situation? I fail to see it.

"No doubt the local enforcement officers in the Federal service are doing all in their power to suppress the evil. But it appears they should have greater means.

"The government is taking in a lot of money from manufacturers, wholesalers and dealers for licenses to handle narcotics. It should make greater efforts to stamp out illicit traffic. The appropriations for this work could be increased.

"No doubt the local police and Federal officers co-operate to some extent now, but certainly greater co-operation can be effected and a united campaign by all departments would see the drug evil wane."

Senator Says Traffic Has Doubled in Four Years

By Universal Service.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The United States government should take the initiative in securing the speedy adoption of an international agrement that will abolish the traffic in habit forming drugs, Senator L. Heisler Ball of Delaware declared today.

Senator Ball, who is a practicing physician, [redacted] he hoped that the House Foreign Affairs Committee will without delay report the Kahn resolution providing for an international conference to abolish the traffic. He continued:

"All the nations of the world should join in perfecting an agreement to end this terrible traffic. Our own government should act without delay. We should extend formal invitations to the other powers, and show our own good faith in the fight against habit forming drugs by supporting an agreement that would put an end to the traffic forever.

"As a physician I have come into contact with the effects of this evil. Since the World War the evil is spreading rapidly, and I do not doubt but that the traffic has doubled during the past four years."

The Mysterious Tragedy at the Masked Ball

THE NEW NOVEL by ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

From Chapter I. of

"The Talkers" in January HEARST'S INTERNATIONAL.

"The revels grew gayer and noisier, and Sutton, face to face with his first adventure, was fascinated. He had not expected such a girl at Derring's."...

—and—

"She doesn't seem to be breathing, and I can't find any pulse.... Of all the rotten luck!"

Restored to Life After Being Dead 10 Hours!

The successful transfer of living glands and its effect upon the resurrected is the tremendously interesting theme of the newest and greatest Chambers novel

SATURNINE, without delusions, Sadoul went about his business in life doing no particular good, and with a capacity for harm limited only by his talents. He had been a little of everything, and always clever—art student, medical student, reporter, critic, writer—intelligent, adroit.

He entertained no delusions concerning mankind, its friendship or its love; he neither expected nor desired anything of it except the saturnine amusement which he extracted from it, and which was his principal form of pleasure.

Then Chance tripped him up. Answering his call for an English stenographer one day the American firm on the Rue Colchas sent him a girl, Gilda Greenway, equipped to take dictation.

It appeared that Gilda was equipped for more than that. Sadoul silently went mad about her.

Sadoul became her shadow everywhere. And, save only for certain lines of resistance, he seemed to have utterly mastered her. But those occult lines held.

His impression upon her had already been made; he could stamp it no deeper, the girl was not in love with him. She never would be. And he knew it.

She seemed to be a passionless little thing, her beauty a golden chrysalis containing nothing—the Psyche within aborted.

Early in Spring a cabled offer from New York brought Sadoul's affairs to a climax. For three days Sadoul beat at her very soul to club it into submission. Then he crawled and wept. The lines held.

Again he battered her with his implacable will till her bruised, stupefied mind gave up. But the lines held.

She was in a daze when the civil ceremony was performed. He cabled to New York, giving up his quarters at the Fireside Club, and requesting his friend, Dr. Pockman, to secure for him a furnished housekeeping apartment on Riverside Drive.

He was having his way with her—or tried to believe he was having it.

And then Destiny pulled an ugly face at him. For the girl utterly refused to submit to the religious ceremony. And the old lines still held.

* * *

"George Derring is giving a dance at his studio apartment to-night," said Sadoul one day to Gilda after their return to New York. "If you care to come you'll have one of those 'good times' you're always wishing for. It will be gay—a masked affair. All the men dress as kings; all the women as queens. You have that wonderful green costume you wore at the Julian ball, haven't you?"

She nodded. Her eyes, which were emerald-green, widened.

"I'd like to go," Gilda said.

* * *

The Tragedy at the Ball.

A masked figure followed them noiselessly upstairs and slipped behind the portieres to observe them.

Sutton, face to face with his first real adventure, was fascinated by the little Queen in Green—not prepared perhaps to encounter such youthful shyness at Derring's. And now he attempted to discover her identity, rather roughly, but she evaded his curiosity and ardent advances and coaxed him to show her Derring's quarters.

The masked man watched them out of narrow eye-slits. They visited the farther rooms; then, having satisfied her curiosity, the Queen in Green turned on her dainty heel.

As the two retraced their steps she prettily avoided Sutton's love-making. It was only after he unmasked and they had stopped by the portieres—so close that the man behind them could have stabbed them—that the girl turned impulsively to Sutton, put her arms around his neck, and took his kiss as passionately as he gave it.

It lasted but a second. She stepped back against the portieres. Both seemed hotly embarrassed.

Then as he encircled her waist again she drew a swift, agonized breath and lurched forward against him.

He reeled under the sudden impact; her silk-clad body sagged, her masked head fell backward, and then, as he caught her, the Queen in Green collapsed in his arms.

Sutton tried to find her pulse, and failed; tried to locate her heart, and couldn't. There was nothing to loosen. He opened a window and came back to her. Then he went out to the gallery and shouted down through the clatter and music:

"Sadoul! Sadoul! Come up here!"

"Your girl—the girl you brought with you—has fainted. You'd better find Dr. Pockman and come up. I don't know what ails her."

Sadoul and Pockman, in gorgeous costumes but unmasked, entered together in a few minutes.

Pockman bent over her; Sadoul and Sutton watched him. She wore no stays—there was not much to her bodice anyway—only a trifle more of her body was visible than it had already revealed.

The two men watched him; the leisurely certainty of everything he was doing preoccupied Sutton.

"Why, she's dead!" said Pockman coolly.

"This girl is dead!" repeated Pockman, still looking significantly at Sadoul. Then he shrugged his bony shoulders, went over to the telephone, and called his laboratory. While waiting, he said to Sadoul: "Here's my chance, by God! It will take about three hours," he added, "—and half an hour more"——

Five hours had passed since Pockman had dexterously performed his startling operation. Four hours since Sutton reverently had laid the single rosebud across her breast, and fallen into troubled sleep beside her bed.

Only the striking clock brought him back to consciousness.

For a little while he stood gazing into darkness, dreading to move. Then, very slowly, he turned and went to the silent bedside.

And noticed that her clasped hands had fallen apart.

Lethargy still fettered mind and body; dully he noticed; dully attempted to account. Then the shock came. For her right hand clutched his rosebud. And her fingers were stirring now—the hand almost imperceptibly creeping across the counterpane.

At that instant the girl opened her eyes.

SLATER WED TO MARTHA LYON IN FRANCE

Big Game Hunter Who Kept Pet Lion in Back Bay Home Has Pittsburgh Bride

News of the marriage in Paris of Horatio Nelson Slater, son of Mrs. Horatio Nelson Slater of Milton and New York, was received in Boston today.

Slater's bride was Miss Martha Ivers Lyon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Lyon of Pittsburgh.

Boston friends of the young man [illegible] wondering if the [illegible] has at last been tamed [illegible] Wondering this, they tell of his exploits. Young Slater some seven years [illegible] one day entered the [illegible] at No. 448 Beacon street, Back Bay with a frolicsome lion cub. He [illegible] [illegible] it to the [illegible] for [illegible] little pet.

Some of the lions at the Franklin Park Zoo were his gift to the city.

PRANKS WITH AUTO.

But lion cubs were not the only pets of young Slater's. At another time, when his mother had sent him off big game shooting in South Africa, he returned home to Milton with Zagee, the "monkey boy." Zagee may have [illegible] society in Africa where [illegible] but in Milton it was decided [illegible] to buy him a suit of clothes [illegible]

Accordingly Mrs. Horatio N. Slater, the mother of [illegible] Zagee, bought him silk shirts, stiff collars [illegible] a bicycle. Zagee tarried in Milton for awhile, and later was shipped as too [illegible] for polite Milton, back to his native Somaliland.

At Harvard also young Slater alternately kept the folks interested by the pranks of his $7,000 automobile, and the antics of his $45 model.

The first [illegible] up by hitting the pace too fast. The second got the young [illegible] into a dilemma one day when it [illegible] Harvard square and held up traffic for fifteen minutes while the wealthy owner tried to force gasoline into the carburetor from a hand syringe attached to a tank of gasoline on the running board.

Here's the way he explained it: "I bought the car for $45. But most of the engine was gone. I tried to pump gasoline into the carburetor with a hand syringe, but it took me seventeen minutes to cross Harvard square and in the middle the pump failed to work. Anybody can have the car who will give me $2[illegible]."

ABANDONS AUTO.

No purchaser appeared, and the car was abandoned. The sporting fortunes of young Slater went on till the day there was delivered at his mother's house in Milton a new flying machine.

It was said he had made a deal with the son of former Governor Foss for getting together in some flights over the joint family domains.

Mrs. Slater put down her foot. Her son went back to his studies at Harvard, and the machine stayed in the family barn.

Later, however, in the war, as a member of the Foreign Legion, Slater did some airplane work. At the beginning of hostilities before the United States entered the war, he drove an ambulance for France.

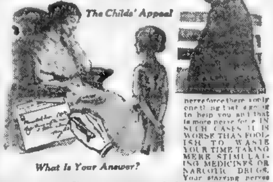
Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine



The Childs' Appeal

What Is Your Answer?

Nuxated Iron Will Increase the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Careworn, Haggard Looking Women in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances

There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without plenty of iron in their blood," said a prominent New York physician and medical author recently. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, rundown, weak, haggard looking women patients. Pallor means anemia. The skin of the anemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks. They become weak, irritable, and nervous because food for the nerves can only be supplied through the blood and when the blood is thin and anemic the nerves are improperly nourished. The nervous mother or housekeeper is highly irritable, forgets where she puts things, and often cannot remember what she started to do. At night she often has a 'good cry' and excuses it by saying it is a relief for her nerves when it means a high state of nerve force exhaustion. Often her nervousness and irritability is a strain on her children and may help to wreck their delicate nervous systems. Medical science and chemistry have proven that NERVE FORCE IS A DISTINCT SUBSTANCE SIMILAR TO YOUR BLOOD. It is the most important fluid in your body. It gives life to your nerves and force to your brain. If you cannot think right, if your memory fails, if you are irritable and easily upset, if little things annoy you, look into your nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. From the pains across the back one woman thinks she has kidney trouble, another may think her spine is injured because of the tender spots which may occur thereon. The dull heavy pain in the lower part of the head or the back of the neck leads another to think she is going to have paresis. Sleeplessness and nervous irritability, heart palpitation and indigestion are very common symptoms. Some people are born with a very small amount of nerve vital fluid because the nerve force has been squandered by the lives led by their ancestors. Others use up their nerve force faster than the body can make it but in every case your nerve force is your capital in life and when it is gone your capital is gone the same as if you had lost or squandered your capital in business. When you lack nerve force there is only one thing that is good to help you and that is more nerve force. IN SUCH CASES IT IS WORSE THAN FOOLISH TO WASTE YOUR TIME TAKING MERE STIMULATING MEDICINES OR NARCOTIC DRUGS. Your starving nerves must have nerve food or something to supply increased nerve force the same as a starving man must have bread to make new flesh and muscle. For centuries science searched for a nerve force food. At last a celebrated French physician brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine a remarkable product which contained the principal chemical constituents of active living nerve force in a form which most closely resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This wonderful product was later combined with organic iron and other valuable agents under the name of 'Nuxated Iron' so that today true artificial nerve force ready to be transformed into active living nerve force the moment it enters the body may now easily be had simply by taking two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day with or after your meals. ORGANIC IRON CONTAINED IN NUXATED IRON IS LIKE THE IRON IN YOUR BLOOD and like the iron in spinach, carrots, lentils and apples. It not only quickly enriches the blood but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds artificial nerve directly to the nerve and brain cells but it indirectly increases the production of nerve force through the medium of the blood.

MANUFACTURERS NOTE—Over 4,000,000 people are using Nuxated Iron annually. From the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. If you are weak, nervous or run down, get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force and made you feel better and stronger in every way, your money will be refunded. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

COLLEGE COACHES DEAD AGAINST THE "PRO" FOOTBALL GAME

BY CHARLES E. PARKER.

New York, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The Association of American College Football Coaches is dead against professional football.

At the second annual meeting of that body, held at the Astor, it was recommended, almost unanimously, that college authorities and the football rules committee take steps to prevent and discourage [illegible] of [illegible] upon a field of sport that is [illegible]

The coaches suggest that college faculties cancel all athletic honors won by men who, in the course of [illegible] professional football they agreed that college coaches should not participate in professional football games, and they recommend that college football officials who officiate in professional games be denied further opportunity of officiating in college contests.

Professional football, the practice of clipping from behind, the legality of shift plays and the rulings on interference with defensive backfield men on forward pass plays, were the chief topics of discussion.

Urged on by Foster Sanford of Rutgers; Gil Dobie of Cornell, Dr. Carl Williams, of Minnesota, and others, there seemed to have developed an intent to recommend the abolition of [illegible]

The coaches turned down the recommendation that there be stricter rules and heavier penalties for interference with defensive backfield men on forward pass plays.

The subject of proselytizing came in for a lengthy discussion, but no action was taken on the matter and no definite charges brought against any college or colleges.

GREAT INTEREST BEING SHOWN IN YACHTING

Interpret Revival to Mean Recovery of Sport From Slump Six Years Ago

New York, Dec. 28.—The revival of yachting marked by performances in the season of 1921 and featured by the unusual interest shown by a new crop [illegible] is interpreted by enthusiasts of the sport as a recovery from the slump into which it tumbled [illegible] six years ago.

Although America got the worst of [illegible] six meter [illegible] Trophy and [illegible] off Halifax in October for the Fishermen's Trophy, there was [illegible] in the activities of yachtsmen in Long Island Sound [illegible]

The weekly competitions of the New York Yacht Club [illegible] to square the defeats at Cowes and Halifax will come next year.

Another sailing duel between the British and American six meter boats has been arranged for the Summer in Long Island Sound when four of the [illegible] cross the ocean to [illegible] their opponents were obliged to do last year.

New England fishermen who had an explanation of the defeat of the American schooner Elsie by Bluenose in her hurried substitution for the Mayflower to conform with the racing requirements will have a chance next Fall to [illegible] over the trophy.

Aside from the evidence generally of renewed awakening of the sport during the last season, its followers [illegible] the official stamp of approval had been affixed with the resumption of the annual cruise of the New York Yacht Club last Summer for the first time since 1915.

TEARNEY PLANS TO SETTLE THE DRAFT

Chicago, Dec. 28.—A plan which President Al Tearney of the Western and Three Eye leagues hopes may settle the draft question disturbing the baseball leagues has been presented by Tearney to Commissioner Landis.

The two leagues represented by Tearney, are among the five which have sought restoration of the draft privileges by the major leagues, as it formerly was operated, but the minors hope for some arrangement similar to Tearney's plan under which the benefits of the draft system can be retained without the objectionable features.

Just what Tearney's proposal embodies, aside from a method to restrict "farming" of players drawn from the minors, is not known. Judge Landis' opinion of the scheme was sought, Tearney said, before making it public.

It is understood that any plan endorsed by Judge Landis will receive the support of President Ban Johnson of the American League, who has been one of the most active advocates of an agreement on a draft system between majors and minors.

Johnson's proposal, though not embodied in Tearney's outline as far as known, is that the major leagues should give a player in return for each player drafted, in addition to the draft price, the exchanged player to be returned to the majors at half the draft price if found unfitted.

This and other concessions have been urged by Johnson to bring the five larger minor leagues into line on the draft dispute.

CENTRE'S STRENGTH DUE TO WONDER ELEVENS AT TWO SCHOOLS

BY WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Dec. 28.—Having visited both the Atlantic and the Pacific seaboards this fall, and having established beyond the last doubt its prowess on the gridiron, the Centre College football team is even more a wonder eleven than on that eventful Saturday in November, 1919, when word was flashed across the land that the Praying Colonels had vanquished West Virginia by 14 to 6, and West Virginia a victor over Princeton by 25 to 0 a week earlier.

The Colonels have been uniformly successful this Fall and have suffered only a single [illegible] their record. Harvard, Arizona, Auburn, Tulane, Washington and Lee, Kentucky [illegible]

That such a football record could be made by a college with fewer than [illegible] students is remarkable, and football followers the country over [illegible] how it was possible. [illegible] at Centre [illegible] that reawakening, at high schools [illegible] Kentucky towns [illegible] even more unusual.

* * *

Centre's position in football today is due directly to the "wonder elevens" developed at two small Kentucky schools at Somerset in 1916 and at Owensboro in 1917.

* * *

First the meteoric Somerset team made a runaway affair of the 1916 high school race in Kentucky, with Red Roberts, Bo McMillin, Filppin and Jeames as its main cogs.

Then came out of Owensboro in 1917 a team that was the wonder of the State. It established the greatest scoring record per minute of a [illegible] team that ever took the [illegible] school. It scored 831 points [illegible] minutes of play and was [illegible] against only to the extent of a safety—two points.

This Owensboro team and the ones [illegible] gave Centre [illegible] Tom Bartlett, [illegible] and Lorter (Humpty) Turner.

With football already on the upgrade at Centre [illegible] Kentucky. With the spread of Centre's [illegible] to encourage other schoolmasters to choose the Danville institution.

* * *

To help matters even further, the "wonder eleven" habit has continued at various Kentucky high schools. No team as brilliant as those of Owensboro and Somerset has come to light, but Mayfield and Hopkinsville have been abnormally strong in recent seasons.

* * *

Herbert Covington of Mayfield, picked to succeed Bo McMillin at quarterback next year, matriculant from [illegible]

McMillin and several other Centre stars will close their careers on January [illegible] when the Colonels will meet Texas A. and M. [illegible] of the Southwestern [illegible] strong and the Kentucky [illegible] for Harvard on October [illegible]

AMERICA WAS KING OF SPORTS DURING 1921

By CLAUDE R. COLLINS

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Dec. 28.—America was crowned king of sports in 1921.

Post-war reaction brought interest in amateur and professional athletics to a new high-water mark. Victor in a majority of the important international competitions, America, at the close of 1921, heads the list of the world's nations.

The stellar event of the year in [illegible] battle on Boyle's Thirty Acres July 2 when Jack Dempsey [illegible] his opponent, Georges Carpentier, France and the rest of the world that America was not yet ready to surrender her pugilistic crown.

* * *

The defeat of Willie Hoppe, king of balkline billiards for fifteen years, by "Young Jake" Shaefer was doubtless the year's greatest surprise in the field of indoor sports.

* * *

Molla Bjurstedt Mallory's stupendous victory over Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen of France, she who was considered by two continents as the [illegible] queen of the racquet, was a blow from which France as well as the rest of Europe will be long in recovering.

The sweeping success of our male tennis stars, the flattering victory of our unmatched polo quartette, our remarkable showing in [illegible] professional international [illegible] aided in putting America ahead of the field in every phase of popular athletic endeavor.

There were three outstanding features in the season of lawn tennis. The successful defence of the Davis Cup by the United States. William T. Tilden, 2d's retention of the world's hard and turf court singles championship and the victory of Mrs. Bjurstedt Mallory which gave her, for the sixth time, the national singles title.

The 1921 season goes down in baseball history as the most remarkable of all time. It was a record breaker in every line. In winning his seventh pennant triumph in the National League championship, McGraw achieved a new distinction in baseball annals.

Miller Huggins, on the other hand, gave New York its first American League banner. Then to exceed both was the victory of the Giants in the World's Series, coming from behind [illegible] eight games, after losing the first two.

Babe Ruth, of course, usurped the individual spotlight throughout the year. He set a new home run record with 59 for the season.

Ben Block's two-year-old colt, Morvich, was the one great sensation of the 1921 turf year. Morvich has considerable on the great Man O' War of two years ago. Man O' War was beaten in one race. Morvich has won eleven consecutive victories.

Although our amateur golfers met a sad fate in the British Isles last Spring, American professionals took fitting revenge when led by Jock Hutchison they later captured the open championship of Great Britain.

Then we withstood the combined attack of England's star amateur and professionals here in America.

Only our woman champion, Alexa Stirling, failed to prove victorious. She was no match for Cecil Leitch, most remarkable woman golfer of all time. Jock Hutchison jumped from one title to another. Ted Ray, Chick Evans, Hutchison and Miss Stirling fell back. Their places were taken by Barnes, Guilford, Miss Hollins and Hagen.

* * *

Excepting the herculean showing of Jack Dempsey, Benny Leonard and Johnny Kilbane are the outstanding stars of the roped arena. Benny traversed another year of championship supremacy as did Kilbane. Jack Britton continues to retain his welterweight crown.

* * *

Thrice has the bantamweight title changed during the year. Joe Lynch [illegible] crown from Pete Herman [illegible] then lost it to Herman [illegible] a few months when it was copped by Johnny Buff.

Football the past season grew to be a full-fledged national game. Notre Dame and Penn State divided honors. California, champs of the Far West, is reputed to be one of the best elevens in America.

American swimmers ruthlessly shattered records during the year. John Weissmuller of I. A. C. and Pua Kealoha of Honolulu in free sprinting; Norman Ross of I. A. C. and Ludy Langer of Honolulu in middle distance, Stephen Ruddy of N. Y. A. C. and Robert Skelton breast stroke, and Warren Kealoha of Honolulu at the back stroke were the individual male stars.

* * *

Ethel Bleibtrey, swimming 100 yards in 1 minute, 3 2-5 seconds; Mrs. Charlotte Boyle Clune, swimming 220 yards in 2 minutes, 47 2-5 seconds, and Sibil Bauer of the I. A. C., who lowered the world's back stroke record for 100 yards to 1 minute, 18 seconds, were the leading natators of the fair sex.

* * *

Joe Moore, nineteen-year-old Manhattan boy star, tops the list of ice performers. He won the international speed skating championship at Lake Placid last February. Norval Baptie and Morris Wood helped develop Moore. They expect him to break every record this Winter. The Lake Placid meet also saw the defeat of Rose Johnson of Chicago by Gladys Robinson of Toronto for the woman's title. Martin Brewster won the junior international title.

WEYMOUTH BASKETBALL TEAM HAS FINE RECORD

The Weymouth A. A., after defeating several of the fastest basketball organizations in the State, is out to annex the State professional championship. The Harvey's Newport team, the Fittons of East Boston, and the Gloucester A. A. are practically the only fast teams in this section, which have not fallen before the teamwork of the South Shore quintet. Games will be arranged with these organizations.

Gannon has caged more baskets this season than any other player. White has a record of shooting twenty baskets in two games. Captain Curtin and Higgins are also among the leading point scorers of the State.

According to Manager McGrory of [illegible] A. A., which scored a victory over Weymouth, will not book a return game.

Jack Kearns, very naturally, is trying to get the dear old public interested in somebody as an opponent for Dempsey. Kearns, aided by Rickard, first tried to put over Jess Willard. The sporting world condemned this match. Now Fulton is offered for slaughter. We feel that he shall be turned down.

Bill Brennan, if in condition, would give Dempsey a hard fight. So would Harry Greb. As for Wills, he would stand an even chance against the champion. Let Fulton retire to back stage. There is no space under the spotlight for one with such diving propensities.

As the New England welterweight champion Siegel failed to startle the world by his fighting. This was rather surprising, as Nate was always rated as a mighty nifty performer prior to winning the championship.

The losing of the title seemed to rekindle Siegal's fighting spirits. He engaged in great bout with Mike Morney and Eddie Shevlin and had regained all of his lost prestige when he was set down by the Boxing Commission.

McGILL'S HOCKEY OUTFIT POPULAR IN BOSTON

The crack McGill University hockey team, which will play against Tech, Boston College and the Pere Marquette K. of C. teams at the Arena on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is the most popular Canadian hockey team that ever visited Boston.

The team is a combination of veterans. It holds a high rating in Canada. It is the ambition of every young skater in Montreal to enter McGill. That university has been sending its hockey teams to this city for the past six [illegible] and except on one or two occasions have played brilliantly.

Combination play has been the secret of McGill's success. The team has speed and the men are good stick handlers, but the passing game has been [illegible] so successfully that it is almost impossible to snag the puck away from the forwards.

The Tech forward line tomorrow will be made up of Bunny Ames of Newton, [illegible] and Bunny Dalton. It is a [illegible] crew but it is doubtful if they carry enough guns for the [illegible] McGill forwards.

Tech will present a clever defense in [illegible] John MacNeil and Captain Hugh Nickle. Nickle is one of the best [illegible] in amateur hockey and the McGill men will have to be on the alert to get the rubber by him.

Coach Fred Rocque will drive his Boston College squad at top pace in preparation for the game Friday night. The good work of Fitzgerald in goal for B. C. was the surprise of the holiday game.

Mike Sparrow, a Boston man, now located in Pittsburgh, believes Joe Mc[illegible]'s Pittsburgh team could defeat the Westminsters and Pere Marquette on the same ice. He saw the local teams play in the holiday double header.

Gerald W[illegible] of Sherbrooke, Que., will arrive here next week and remain here through January. Gerald is rated an efficient referee. He was a member of Skilton's Intercolonial team in the series with B. A. A. here years ago.

[illegible] Denny, a member of the Pilgrim A. A. here eight years ago, is in town for the Winter. Denny will probably be seen at the Arena as a refereee. He played with the New York A. C. twelve years ago and rated with the leading forwards in that city.

N' ORLEANS HAS BIG RACE ON JANUARY 2

New Orleans, La., Dec. 28.—[illegible] Secretary Joseph [illegible] has announced a [illegible] list of the stake events [illegible] tions for the [illegible] at the Fair Grounds under the auspices of the Business Men's Racing Association.

The New Year's Handicap [illegible] and a sixteenth [illegible] olds and upwards, to [illegible] with the added [illegible] will be the [illegible] feature of the opening program of January 2.

Some of the best horses in the country will be pointed for this race, so it goes without saying that it will furnish a thriller for those who journey to the [illegible] of the South' next Monday.

Next in importance is the Classic Handicap for three-year-olds and upwards at six furlongs and the [illegible] High Weight Handicap for three-year-olds and upward, also at three-quarters of a mile. Both have an added purse of $[illegible].

In addition to the above mentioned classics it is the intention of the Fair Grounds management to offer a $[illegible] handicap each Saturday throughout the entire winter season.

The picturesque Fair Grounds track has been placed in perfect shape for the opening [illegible] within the enclosure [illegible] and a host of turf fans from all parts of the continent await the bugle call that will inaugurate the 1922 season, which promises to be more brilliant than any heretofore undertaken.

Postpone Tia Juana Racing Because of Flood

Tia Juana, Mex., Dec. 28.—On account of a recent flood as the result of a cloudburst, there will not be any racing for several days at the local track. The storm did considerable damage to the paddocks and the track.

This announcement will relieve the minds of many sporting men who wondered why there were no entries nor results from the Tia Juana track published.

This may mean that racing will not be resumed at the Tia Juana track until after New Year's. But the soil in Mexico dries out quickly after a severe rain and racing will be held as soon as possible.

THERE'S this to be said about witches — grown-ups [illegible] afraid of them [illegible] time, even if one were [illegible] on a brimstone broomstick and mumble words of warning it wouldn't matter so long as the sun shone, but in the dark that's different.

Because the [illegible] you that every [illegible] of every w[illegible] shape she takes [illegible] children [illegible].

Of course [illegible] good witches [illegible]. Aileen Barrett knew all about it. She was [illegible] that fairies lived in the flowers and rode on the long sweeping billows that thundered on the rocky beach beyond the little [illegible].

Her [illegible] brave [illegible] no fairy could ride a roller and escape without broken bones, but Aileen had two answers to that. First, fairies didn't have bones; and, second, if they did they could mend them themselves in a minute.

John Barrett laughed and told Bridget, who ruled the Barrett cottage, and Bridget blessed the faith of girlhood and prayed that Aileen would never grow up. That made John Barrett sigh for Aileen was growing up every day, blossoming into a wonderful Irish beauty with dark ringlets and velvet eyes and soft smile.

Lots of food for thought for John [illegible] who remembered her mother [illegible]. Sometimes it seemed [illegible] and again it seemed [illegible] hours.

[illegible] in the doorway, pipe in his mouth and shrewd eyes almost hidden by heavy brows.

[illegible] gone to the village [illegible] to meet [illegible] peering [illegible] after [illegible].

And at last he saw—no, not a witch, nor fairy, but both in one. [illegible] his daughter seated on a [illegible] surrounded by boys and girls whose eyes were focussed on a book from which his wonder girl was reading.

John Barrett took the pipe from his mouth and listened, closed his eyes and listened [illegible] voice of Aileen was [illegible] of her mother, long [illegible].

Aileen was [illegible] fairy tales— [illegible] she paused [illegible] a sturdy listener, whose face betrayed an impatient scowl. "Why, Tom lad, don't you believe in fairies?"

"Not I," answered the bold young man, kicking his twelve-year-old toe into the dirt as a sign of contempt.

The Children Awed

The other children gazed at him a little awed. It was fine to be old like Tom, old and wise, but still if Aileen said there were fairies, why——

"All right," laughed the girl, "never mind, children, some day Tom will see he's all wrong; he's a very old man now, and he knows everything."

Tom colored and moved away, and the voice of the reader continued:

"And sometimes the witch appears in the shape of a pig when she's on the lookout for bad little boys and girls, so watch out for the witch pig."

Aileen Barrett is the best friend of the children of Newry. Her greatest delight is to read to them fairy stories and tales about the ancient lore of Ireland.

Anxious glances all around and then a scramble, a rush, a mad exodus unheeded by Aileen, intent on reading. John Barrett smiled.

"And when"—the girl looked up—she was alone—alone save for an insistent porker, who snuffled at her [illegible] and [illegible] at her [illegible] piggy eyes.

"Ah!" laughed John Barrett.

"Oh-o," laughed his daughter. "So that's the way the audience scampers when the pig comes to listen."

The girl lifted her starry eyes and burst into laughter, calling to the runaways: "Come along back, babies, that's not a witch pig, are you, piggy?" and she flipped one of his ears.

The pig grunted. "There," cried Aileen, "you see he says no; you heard him, didn't you?" They trooped back stepping sideways.

"Here, Tom, you aren't afraid, send him away."

Tom hesitated; in the end he gulped and developed a desire to go home, but his sangfroid didn't leave him. "If it's a witch pig," he said, loudly, "he'll go away by himself."

The girl resumed her reading and the children their listening. Aileen looked up to the blue sky and motioned with her arms the course of this particular witch when she came strolling down out of the moon and the little heads bobbed up and down, to the right and to the left, following with slavish precision the motion of her hands.

But even witch stories can't last forever. This one ended abruptly with the arrival of a portly woman hailed as mother by several treble voices. On her arm she carried an empty basket, and she bowed as she passed it to Aileen.

"Heaven bless ye, for bringing the food, Miss, and may the Lord reward ye with a handsome husband."

The girl [illegible] ed therein the book and with a promise of [illegible] story another day, linked her arm through her father's and started for home.

"It's yourself is the witch, I'm thinking," he said, pointing with his blackthorn stick toward the book in the basket.

A Real Blessing

"No witches are always [illegible]." She turned to wave a last farewell to the urchins whose parting cries followed her, and to stop an aged crone, who plodded along bowed under a load of wood.

[illegible] her gen[illegible] good nature [illegible] sympathy for the [illegible] presence in his [illegible].

"You'll be awhile in the village?" he broke in.

"Only a little while, father dear."

"I'll be moving along; Sir Fergus will be expecting me."

With the courtesy of his race, he lifts his hat, including the wrinkled carrier with his blooming young daughter.

"There goes a gentleman," said the crone.

"There goes the best father in the world," said Aileen.

"It's deservin' a handsome husband ye'll be," said the old woman, smiling a smile that showed a painful lack of teeth.

Aileen went on. Twice in the same afternoon to be wished a handsome husband, she was rather young to be thinking of husbands, though, of course, she had her own ideas of what her husband would be like. Naturally, he'd be handsome, she resented the mere intimation that he wouldn't; also he'd be strong and he'd come after her in true storybook fashion — on a splendid horse in spite of her [illegible] carry her off. Pleasant dreams, these, in keeping with the lovely countryside and the storied magic of the sea beyond the wild rocks.

Visions of Girlhood

She walked with visions rising from the dusty road and almost ran into a cart rambling along with the aid of a long-eared donkey. Not a sign of life within. Here was a miracle, for a donkey traveling forward by himself is a thing unknown.

Aileen hailed him, whereupon two heads popped up from the depths of the basket—a very little head and a larger head.

"There you are," she called gaily, just as though they'd planned a surprise. "I know you were there all the time."

"How'd you know?" from the boy.

"I knew. I've a book here in my basket that tells me all about little boys and girls."

More laughing, a kiss for the baby and on again.

A great cackling ahead. Bunches of white on yellow legs and long necks and beady black eyes protesting against being driven, and behind, a goose girl. She, too, must stop and talk to Aileen.

The daughter of John Barrett was solicitous that the maid must go barefooted, but the maid made light of it. Indeed, why not? The geese get along nicely unshod and why not she? Who ever heard of a goose girl with clogs? More laughter and Aileen proceeded to the village reminded of her errands by the basket on her arm.

John Barrett had no need to look back. He had eyes in the back of his head where Aileen was concerned. He could see happiness following her like a roseate cloud.

At times the housewife will want to make an economical cake. A one-egg cake is good if properly [illegible] and carefully baked. [illegible] A standard half-pint measuring cup is used.

ONE-EGG CAKE.

One and one-half cups sugar, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ cup butter, ¾ cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup milk (about).

Mix and sift the flour and baking powder. In an empty bowl cream the butter and sugar. Add the egg, well beaten. Then add the flour and milk alternately, a little at a time, until all the flour is used and enough milk has been used to make a drop batter. Bake in well-greased and floured pans. Rich Girl, Poor Girl—A Fine New Serial

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

[illegible]ght, 1921, Star Company

PATRICIA laughed. "I will—if [illegible] to [illegible] me up [illegible]."

[illegible] laughed too. "But [illegible] pretty [illegible]," he warned.

As Patricia reached the head of the [illegible] found her father waiting for her. He asked a question, but with more authority than [illegible] adopted.

"Patty, who is this young Forsythe?"

"A man I met last week at Mary Copeland's," she answered.

"What do you know about him?"

"Only that he has nice manners, [illegible] well. [illegible] that I care about," was [illegible] response. "I do not ex[illegible]. So do [illegible]."

Kissed Him Between the Eyes

[illegible] his stern features [illegible] she went on downstairs to the drawing room where her [illegible] her.

[illegible] "You see I am on time."

"Yes," he held her hand closely. "[illegible] say—you're looking fine!"

[illegible] was pretty, with a doll-like beauty that she made the most of. Her hair was auburn and her eyes gray. Since she left school she had gone to a hair-dresser who, she declared, "had done wonders for her hair."

"She treats it with a tonic that puts life into it," she said when her mother commented on the ruddy gleams that were changing the brown tresses to auburn.

Both parents believed her, while regretting that "Patty's hair was turning red."

Patricia was not in the habit of worrying. But it would interfere with her own comfort if she had to follow her father's suggestion and spend more time with her mother. So his recent remarks occurred to her frequently tonight.

Until this Autumn Mrs. Hollingshead had been able to see enough to go about the house alone in the day time. Now, however her sight had failed entirely. Of course it was hard on her mother, Patricia mused. Yet she—the daughter—could be young but once. There must be some way out of it she decided. She would not let it spoil her present fun.

Harry Forsythe had asked her to go to Solomon Heyman's with him. They had a good cabaret there he said. She had heard of Heyman's as a rather rapid place. Her parents might not approve of her presence there. So she did not tell them where she and her escort were to din.

Patricia Hollingshead and her companion had their first dance of the evening between the first and second courses of their dinner.

The rich girl was having a good time. She had [illegible]. Although she had been to many restaurants, she had never been to one of just this type.

Harry Forsythe was what is known as a man about town. When he learned from Patricia that she was unaccustomed to what he called "gay joints," he informed her that her education had been sadly neglected.

"You swells, who only patronize tony, high-priced eating places, never really seen your New York," he declared. "I dare you to go to Sol Heyman's with me."

She went. As she reveled in novel experience, she enjoyed this. Of course she had to admit that some of the musical numbers were pretty bad, but one could always laugh at them.

She did not care for music, anyway, and talked steadily while an Italian sang execrably the Toreador's song from "Carmen." She watched a little dancer in bouffante drapery as she flung arms and legs wildly about. But she and her escort chatted on steadily through the performance. Then, when the musicians played some more jazz, she and Forsythe danced once more.

It was after this number that Adelaide Brown came out upon the stage.

"Oh, Lord!" Forsythe groaned as the opening bars of Tosti's "Good-bye" sounded. "Why not give us a hymn-tune and be done with it? If I ran a cabaret I would exclude all but jazz—wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I guess I would," his companion replied.

Her eyes were not on the platform on which the singer stood ready to begin. Instead, Patricia was gazing at a couple at a table not far from where she and Forsythe sat. Their flirting, or love-making, was too obvious to meet even with her approval, and she was no prude.

If a man must try to hold a girl's hand, or put his arm about her, surely he might wait until he was alone with her!

Yet she continued to watch the couple who offended her taste, rather than her morals, until her escort's exclamation drew her attention to the music.

Patricia Encouraged

"Oh!" she echoed Forsythe's groan. "Tosti's 'Good-bye' again! I am tired to death of it! And what a voice!"

The waiter, serving the third course, was at that moment standing between her and the orchestra. It was not until he moved away that her eyes rested on the singer. Then she started violently.

"What's up?" Harry demanded. "Can't you stand it? I say!—the little thing is going to flunk!"

"Oh, no—she must not!" his companion exclaimed. "Why—I know her! She is the little milliner. Oh—poor kid!"

For Adelaide Brown's voice was trembling periously. It was at this juncture that she was seized with a terror lest she break down.

It was also at this juncture that her eyes fell on Patricia Hollingshead. And Patricia was smiling encouragement at her. She was also nodding her approval.

Patricia was intensely selfish. But she was not unkind. Moreover, when she liked any one she wanted that person to appear well. She had seen Adelaide Brown this morning and had liked her. The girl must not fail and appear ridiculous to all the people who were either ignoring or listening superciliously to her attempts to sing.

The rich girl smiled and nodded the encouragement she wished to convey.

The result was instantaneous, and Patricia knew it. Her vanity was gratified by the effect of her action.

"Surely," her companion scoffed, "you are not approving of that awful performance!"

She checked him by a gesture. "Be still," she muttered.

"Whew!" Harry Forsythe whispered under his breath when, having given vent to the last wailing, "Good bye!" the singer retired. "She certainly did scalp that last high note, didn't she? And I believe it was because of your smile at her."

"I know it was," Patricia said, delightedly. "But for me she would have gone to pieces."

"I am sure she would," Harry accused. "You have encouraged an outrage. What under the sun did you do it for?"

"Because," Patricia exclaimed, "I know who the poor little thing is. She is a clerk in the millinery shop I went to only today. What brings her here I do not know. Her name is Brown."

"How interesting!" Forsythe remarked, sarcastically.

But Patricia was not to be snubbed by his sarcasm.

"It is interesting," she declared. "For I happened to take a fancy to her only this morning. And I told her I would go regularly to that shop if she was to be there. She said she was. And now she is here."

"Probably earning a little bit on the side," Harry opined. "Come on let's have this dance."

THE SOCIAL GAME

SOME HELPFUL ADVICE ON HOW TO PLAY IT

By Beatrice Fairfax

RECENTLY a great number of young girls have written to me asking for suggestions about entertaining their callers. It doesn't sound like a very serious problem to us grown-ups. But memory recalls a picture of myself at sixteen sitting stiffly across a big old fashioned living room trying to say something to the boy who had come to show me the medal he had won at a recent track meet.

I liked the boy. His eighteen-year-old blond cleanness stirred something in my young heart. His mother was my mother's friend. I was allowed to entertain him alone in the big living room. But instead of staying until the ten-thirty permitted by a beautiful understanding mother, he started to go at 9. And if mother had not come to the rescue he would have gone and the friendship for which I longed would have ended then and there—in the frost of my youthful awkwardness.

So I know that eager, terrified youth is likely to defeat itself through its own ignorance of the social charm and friendliness that seems so much part of our very selves to us grown-ups.

The boy who comes to call is shy, too. The first thing for the young hostess to do is to make him feel at home. Not by fussing over him and by forcing pillows behind his back and giggling conversation on his stumbling mind. All my blessed mother had to do to make Rex feel at home was to say:

"I hear you won a medal at the track meet last week, Rex. Isn't that splendid? Will you show it to me?"

Then she sat near enough to the boy to talk to him without shouting across space. And looking at the medal with close and sympathetic interest, she saw he had received it for the pole vault. At once she asked him about jumping and vaulting. Her questions opened a door in the boy's mind. Her sympathy and interest made him sure of himself.

And there lies the whole art of entertaining.

The girl who really wants to be entertaining will make it her business to stop thinking about herself and the impression she is making, and try to find out what her visitor is interested in, what will prove the key to his thoughts.

It can be done. And the girl who does it need never fear that she's a bore. For the bore is always the person who talks about herself when the other person longs for a chance to hold forth about what appeals to him.

Don't "show off," young hostess. But give your caller a chance to shine.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

I have been talking lately with a number of important men, whose names are known throughout the continent, and one thought driven home to me is this:

Every man, no matter how big he may be, has a boss.

Many employes don't like the idea of having to obey orders, and hope the day will come when they can do the bossing themselves. They imagine that the boss has no boss, that he can do as he likes, go and come when he likes, following only his own sweet will. This false notion tends to engender dissatisfaction among workers. They contrast what they picture as the unrestricted freedom of the boss with their own subjection to orders.

The truth is that all of us are under authority, that all of us have some kind of a boss, that all of us must have regard to the will of others, that all of us must toe the line of duty—or sink. A large organization was recently in trouble, and the question arose as to whether the head of it should be dropped. The directors decided to be governed wholly by the attitude manifested by the public. If there was insistent clamor that the president should go, then he would be dropped. In the absence of an imperative public demand, that he would be kept on. The boss' bosses, the directors, realized that they also had a boss, the public.

Our financial and business magnates often are anxious to do things which they hesitate to do solely because they realize that they are subject to the will of the public, and that if they attempted something which they would bring down upon their heads general condemnation, their project would prove inadvisable.

Then, our financial and business giants now have as a rule, a multiplicity of governmental bosses—a railroad president remarked the other day that every railroad head now had ninety-nine bosses, ranging from the Interstate Commerce Commissioners down.

If everyone could but get it into his or her head that everyone else is subject to orders, there would be less discontent and more happiness in the world. Many workers would not object so bitterly to being bossed if they realized that their bosses were also, in turn, bossed. I wrote something on this subject years ago. I then quoted Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, at that time a leader of New York's fashionable four hundred, as saying:

"There is one thing that servants do not seem to appreciate, namely, that while they must jump at the ring of the bell, all of us must jump at the ring of our bells. We all have some others pressing the button for use, no matter how comfortable and luxurious our environment may seem."

How many house servants, how many shop girls, how many telephone operators, how many married women in poor circumstances, ever conceived that even the greatest of society leaders had to jump at the ring of a bell?

Yet it is eternally true. And not one whit more true of plutocratic ladies than of equally plutocratic men.

The bell of public opinion is today making the Morgan-Rockefeller-Vanderbilt class jump. Nor are the strongest of our corporations immune. The railroads have had to jump pretty lively, and certain gigantic industrial combinations are also being put through their paces.

"In theory only," you may reply. Well, it is your own fault if it is not so in practice also, or you are responsible for law-making, and no capitalist can defy a law which the mass of the people insist upon being obeyed. If, though your laxness and your neglect of civil duties, matters have gone awry, then do not seek to lay the blame on another's shoulders.

Happily, the people are coming to realize their rights. But let them not forget their responsibilities. And—this is the point I would seek to emphasize—do not act on the assumption that the capitalists, the directors and presidents of railroads, the managers of industrial corporations, live in a world different from your own, that they have no bells to bother them, that for them life is one long, sweet song. More, if they do not answer the bell satisfactorily, they cannot hold their jobs. If they do not faithfully serve the public they are elbowed aside sooner or later. In these latter days it is sooner rather than later.

If you are inclined to make any new year resolutions, I would suggest that you head your list with this one:

"I won't indulge in any self-pity."

LEADERS REACT UNDER PROFIT TAKING

Locomotives Were Foremost in Morning Advances; Lowest Prices in Last Hour

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

The New York market had a rather heavy tone at the close and the final price movement was irregular. Realization selling featured the last hour when prices were the lowest for the day. Some of the leaders were the most reactionary stocks on the list. Trading was active, transactions exceeding 500,000 shares.

Oil issues ranged from their highest to their lowest in the afternoon. Locomotives ended weak. Rails receded. The call rate advanced to 5½ per cent. late in the session. The erratic course of money was an adverse influence upon stocks. Liberty bonds were strong.

Some profit taking reduced gains or obliterated gains in the last half of the morning, but the market was still strong at noon. American Locomotive lost all of its advance and a point besides during the forenoon. In the third hour a higher level was reached by a number of issues including sugars. The latter were led by American Sugar and Punta Alegre. American Ice rallied and showed a point gain, selling at a new high for the year. Lima Locomotive was off three points at midday. Sears Roebuck sold above 60 for the first time in weeks. Pan American and Mexican Petroleum were strong oils. Domestic petroleums were rather heavy. Motors ascended in the afternoon, with Studebaker foremost in the rise. Westinghouse and International Harvester were among issues to move up the most. Call money opened at 5 per cent., dropped to 4½ per cent. and went back to 5 per cent. Foreign exchange had a narrow range and indefinite trend. Sterling was lower.

UP AT THE OPENING.

The Tuesday advance was resumed when the market began this morning. Equipments were the leaders, American Locomotive and Baldwin selling at new 1921 highs. Lima Locomotive was a shade lower. The latter climbed nearly nine points yesterday. It is rumored that this corporation may be absorbed by the Pullman Company. It is denied that a merger of Baldwin and American Locomotive is contemplated. Rails had a better tone. November reports already made indicate that the net operating income of Class 1 carriers may total much more than $50,000,000, the amount forecast. Oils moved up at once, with the exception of Pierce Oil. Shipping shares advanced. There was not much price change for coppers, sugars, steels and motors. Steels did not respond at all to the announcement that the subscription price to employes for U. S. Steel stock has been set at $84 a share. This is $3 advance over the 1921 price, and indicates that the outlook in this industry is regarded favorably by its chiefs.

FEW WEAK SPOTS.

The list had a few weak spots during the morning. Among issues to decline from one to two points were American Ice, Sumatra and International Paper. Rails competed with equipments for leadership in the second hour, the strongest being Union Pacific, New Haven, Reading, Atchison and Canadian Pacific. New Haven reports for the September quarter a deficit after charges of $1,009,708 as compared with a deficit of $588,191 for the corresponding part of 1920. Although Cuban raw sugar had just sold at a new low for the year, the shares of refining companies remained steady. They are believed to have discounted the worst that can happen in the trade. Nothing new was reported regarding money this morning. The call rate is expected to remain around 5 per cent. until January 1 disbursements are made and the period of annual settlements has passed. Government withdrawals in New York yesterday totaled $14,500,000.

HOPEFUL POINTS FOR BUSINESS IN 1922

Evans Produces Some Cheerful Evidence That Outlook Is Promising

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Since Edison made pictures walk around on a piece of cloth and the aviators abolished the firmament, it has come to be thought, especially by Americans, that anything can be done, and therefore the ghastly pile that Europe now is fails to frighten our people.

Accordingly men who were enterprising in 1914 are enterprising now, especially as they see a little of the tax penalty for prosperity cut from the Federal law for 1922. The coming year is feared by our people with a crude mixture of hopes and fears, to be sure, but hope is a little in the majority.

What have we for specific evidences of this state of things? The two largest dry goods houses in this city declare trade to be good and the outlook full of cheer. The steel interest is not quite so confident, but from various points in the Chicago district we hear of a strong expectation of larger trade next year in spite of the recent reaction from the little lift the steel interest had a few weeks ago.

HAVE BIG SURPLUSES.

A broader idea relates to many corporations having to do with steel that are declared to be in such strong position that any small reverse would cut little figure and are expectant of a much larger business. Investors in the stocks of these companies call attention to their large surplusses, United States Steel being the big thing in the lot, but many of the smaller ones relatively just as well off.

These are concerns that know enough to save up some of the money they made during the war and not to express their prosperity of that time in large stock dividends.

But perhaps most interesting of all is the reading of the wheat situation by some of our experienced men. That commodity has been perhaps the most discouraging of all in the American list. The price went below a dollar and has had a large rise to the present figures which these enthusiasts declare will look very low before the crop year is over.

WHEAT FOR RUSSIA.

If everybody in the world were to have a square meal three times a day there is no doubt as to the effect on the American wheat market, but the probability of such condition is extremely remote. The government's relief plan calls for many millions of bushels to be given to the Russians, and it is reported that the soviet government is to turn over to the American Relief Commission ten million dollars gold for the purchase in this country of foodstuffs and seed for the Volga district.

Then the observer looks cross-eyed at the railroads, and the railroads look back at him cross-eyed. The improvement that they picked up on their way to "great prosperity" a few months ago shrinks a little, and that 5½ per cent. on the capitalization of $18,900,000,000 is a dwarf.

That the railroad companies are discharging shop men on such a large scale is less than cheering to the holders of railroad securities.

And neither on the railroads nor in the mills have we made much of a start on the liquidation of labor.

If it be true, as Mr. Topping says, that the producers of steel are losing money on every ton they turn out cost must go down or price must go up, the latter being the less probable. The likelihood, however, that a number of these companies will be combined is giving a certain support to the prices of the stocks, some of which are now showing great strength.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Considering the rather limited volume of trading, with transactions of less than 600,000 shares, Tuesday's market presented an appearance of relative activity and strength. Buying in a few selected issues was of a confident and concentrated character, and advances were easily brought about. The firmness of the copper shares was the feature in the forenoon, with Anaconda reaching a new high level, while Inspiration, Utah and American Smelting and Refining moved upwards. Along in the afternoon heavy buying of American Loco and a sharp rise in Lima Loco started a move in the equipment group, and Baldwin reached the new high level of 99 1-2 on a turnover of about 40,000 shares. American Loco also made a new high level, and Lima Locomotive equalled its previous top.

SEVERAL specialties were quite active and strong, among them being Jones Brothers' Tea and American Ice, both of which made new high levels. The oils were steady, and late in the day the steel shares moved upward on a moderate volume of trading. The advance in the motors was due to buying, which usually comes a short time prior to the automobile show, which will be held this year the second week in January. The rails were fairly steady, but made no important response to the earnings statements of New York Central, Pennsylvania and Wabash, which were more favorable than expected.

THE strength of the market must be largely set down to technical considerations. Short covering undoubtedly played its part in the strength of several of the more active issues, notably Baldwin and Corn Products.

THERE had been some liberal selling by the professionals before the Christmas holiday, and the covering of these commitments was in part and perhaps largely responsible for Tuesday's rise. Very little selling for the purpose of establishing income tax losses has made it appearance, and this also must have been a surprise to the pessimists.

AMERICAN LOCOMOTIVE was the star performer in the day's market. An advance of more than six points for this usually sedate issue was sufficient in itself to start gossip. Reports in circulation ranged from a merger of this company with the American Car & Foundry Company to the passing of control to the General Electric Company. Apparently every office had its own theory, each providing more good things for the holders of the stock than the most ardent bull could desire.

THE presidents of American Locomotive and American Car & Foundry occasionally take luncheon together. This was remarked in substantiation of the report that the two companies are to merge. What is known is that the American Locomotive Company recently has received some sizeable orders. There is a growing conviction that electrification of railroads is going to proceed apace, and that American Locomotive will work with General Electric as they have done before in building electric locomotives. An insignificant short interest at the beginning of the present movement has become of large proportions as the price advanced, and part of today's rise at least was due to covering these contracts.

TEXAS GULF SULPHUR repeated its usual performance of establishing a new high record price. The stock was taken in large quantities up to 41⅞. Freeport Texas is another company whose stock is classed as a sulphur stock. This stock has thus far failed to participate in the advance of Texas Gulf. There were no new reports to account for the buying.

IN sympathy with the strength in American Locomotive, Baldwin was taken in hand and advanced to a new high price for the year. It is understood that a group of up-town traders have been selling this stock short, and they were squeezed. The Baldwin Works will close down until January 3, for annual inventory, and upon re-opening will operate on about the same basis which has obtained. The Street is awaiting news of the result of President Vauclain's trip to Europe.

SOME selling came into Atlantic Gulf and West Indies at the close of last week on a report that the Mexican subsidiary would have difficulty in meeting the tax payments due the Mexican government should they be insisted upon. It was indicated officially that the total amount involved is only about $55,000 and that it has not been determined that even this must be paid. There was some covering of shorts, as well as buying by the same interests which have been accumulating this stock in recent months.

Boston Financial Notes

Granby's November profits approximated $160,000. In the first half of this year it was operated at a loss of about $300,000.

Ventura cash now totals about $1,500,000 and it has net quick assets exceeding $2,400,000.

The West End Street Railway has sold an issue of $2,700,000 five-year 6½ per cent. bonds, dated February 1, 1921, to a syndicate headed by the Old Colony Trust Co.

A Michigan dispatch says higher mineralization is noted on Mayflower's 1450-foot level as the drifts extend from the shafts, a condition that is extremely favorable.

Sugar Price Reduced

New York, Dec. 28.—The Federal Sugar Refining Co. has reduced its price for refined sugar to 4.90 cents a pound.

FIRM TONE TO THE BOSTON MARKET

Coppers and Rails Higher; Ventura an Active Issue; Curb Movement Mixed

The Boston market began with a firm tone and remained strong during the forenoon. Both coppers and rails were higher but packing issues were heavy. Eastern Steamship was quite active, advancing more than a point to a new 1921 high. Island Creek began with a five-point advance but lost half of it. Ventura continued to figure extensively in the trading and ranged from unchanged to a fraction higher. Gains of from one to two points were made by Ahmeek, Mohawk, Old Dominion, Calumet & Hecla, Boston Elevated and Maine Central. Boston & Maine D deceded a point.

Fractional gains were made by Boston & Maine, New Haven, Copper Range, Quincy, United Shoe, Eastern Manufacturing and Lowe's Theatres. Among stocks to decline a little were American Telephone, Massachusetts Gas, United Fruit, American Sugar, Carson Hill, National Leather, Swift & Co. and Mexican Investment.

The tone was not so good in the afternoon. Amoskeag sold at its highest since new stock was issued. It advanced more than two points. Point losses were sustained by Calumet & Hecla, National Leather and Waldorf. Edison sagged two. Old Dominion and Mohawk lost morning gains.

CURB TREND IRREGULAR.

The Curb trend was irregular. It opened with gains predominating, but was not so strong later in the forenoon. Among active issues were Daddy, Crystal and Mutual. At noon Crystal was up 1 cent at 59 cents, Texana 1 cent at 10 cents, Hecla Divide 2 cents at 10 cents, Daddy 1 cent at 12 cents and Colorado Extension 1-16 at 1⅜. Among losses were Boston & Montana 1 cent at 89 cents, Mutual 1 cent at 37 cents, Bagdad 1 cent at 43 cents, Mohican 2 cents at 45 cents, Southern States 1 cent at 37 cents and Boston Ely 2 cents at 68. New Rilla had lost an opening gain.

Next Wool Auction

The next wool auction by the government in Boston will be held in Ford Hall on January 4. The offerings will consist of approximately 8,000,000 pounds, including 1,600,000 pounds Australian and New Zealand wools; 1,800,000 pounds South American combing wool, 3,400,000 pounds South American carding wool, 175,000 pounds domestic grease wool, 1,025,000 pounds scoured wool and 6,723 pounds worsted yarn.

New England's Motor Trucks

According to a local financial publication by January 1 the motor trucks registered in New England will total 107,700, an increase of more than 11,000, or 11.4 per cent, in a year. But there are more than five and a half times as many passenger cars as trucks in this section and the increase of these vehicles in 1921 will be nearly 97,400, or a little less than 20 per cent.

New York's Idle Army

A canvass of the unemployed in New York results in the estimate that the number of idle workers who are residents of that city totals 331,000, or about 13 per cent. of those classed by the Census Bureau as engaged in gainful occupations. In addition is the floating army of the jobless. This is estimated as numbering from 20,000 to 50,000.

Copper Market Steady

At the end of the year the demand for copper is quiet and the trade does not expect much activity on the part of buyers until 1922. Producers are cheerful over the prospect of an elimination of the surplus stock of metal within a short time. Talk of 15-cent copper is persistent, but present quotations for first quarter shipments range from 13 7-8 to 14 cents a pound.

Pea Coal Lower

Owing to light local demand and a surplus stock the retail price of pea coal has been reduced from $13 to $10.50 a ton in Boston. But coal dealers declare there is no reason for expecting a cut in the price of other sizes of anthracite fuel.

Zinc Ore Advances

Zinc ore advanced last week in the Joplin market, being quoted at from $26 to $30 a ton for 60 per cent. zinc. Sales of zinc concentrates totalled 9,950 tons. Lead ores held steadily at the $58 level for 80 per cent lead and every available ton was purchased.

Lehigh Valley reports for November $1,232,898 decrease in gross and $511,120 gain in net.

FULL FREEDOM FOR INDIA IS DEMANDED

Ghose Traces the Growth of Movement From Its Start in 1905

Following is the third of a series of articles on the rise of the Nationalist movement in India, written exclusively for Universal Service, by Saliendra N. Ghose, national director American Commission to Promote Self Government in India.

By SALIENDRA N. GHOSE

Washington, Dec. 28.—The non-co-operative phase of the Indian Nationalist movement was deliberately aimed to paralyze the British administration and to replace it by a government of the people, by the people and for the people of India. It was a peaceful method of revolt, to which the people were pledged to adhere until Britain should begin hostilities.

The general Nationalist movement of which this non-co-operative movement is the passing phase started in 1905 with the organization of the Young Bengal party, which sought to achieve the independence of India by means of direct action and the use of all available forces. That party later on became enlarged into the Indian Nationalist party, in which capacity it is functioning in some countries today.

This movement kept aloof from the Indian National Congress and similar organizations until 1920, and then threw into it its whole weight with Mahatma Gandhi, captured the Congress organization, which till then stood for self-government along dominion lines, and changed its creed to that of absolute swaraj—absolute political independence, economic freedom and spiritual salvation.

The Indian Nationalist party joined with Gandhi because of his program of non-co-operation. The program in its present form was launched by Gandhi in August, 1920, and was adopted as a national program at a special session of the Indian National Congress in Calcutta in September, 1920.

The special committee of that special session advised:

"Surrender of titles and honorary offices and resignation from nominated seats in local bodies.

"Refusal to attend government levees, durbars and other official or semi-official functions held by government officials or in their honor.

"Gradual withdrawal of children from schools and colleges owned, aided or controlled by government; in place of such schools and colleges, the establishment of national institutions in the various provinces.

"Gradual boycott of British courts by lawyers and litigants and the establishment of private arbitration courts for sittlement of private disputes.

"Refusal on the part of the military, clerical and laboring classes to offer themselves as recruits for service in Mesopotamia."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Famous Old Rip Van Winkle," With Another Jefferson, Pleases the Children

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THIS is children's week at the Park Theatre, though the older members of the family will find more than a little to claim their attention. The headline attraction is "Rip Van Winkle," with Thomas Jefferson playing the role made famous by his father, Joseph Jefferson. The other film on the bill is an entertaining Realart comedy, starring Wanda Hawley, "The Love Charm."

"Rip Van Winkle" has been, as was to be expected, rather expanded for the film presentation. There have been quantities of country scenes brought in, as well as unlimited opportunities for comedy work.

There is little new to be said about this old favorite. It was a happy inspiration to have it filmed, particularly since the son of the original "Rip" was available for the title role. Mr. Jefferson plays it with relish and understanding. Ward Lascelles has produced it well, while the direction and continuity are consecutive and easy. Mary Anderson does a particularly pleasing piece of work in the leading feminine role. Milla Davenport plays Gretchen, Rip's "wildcat wife," and handles her part splendidly.

As often happens in the movies much of the honor goes to children. In this case little Elsie Messinger and Francis Carpenter are the chief players, in the roles of little Meenie Van Winkle and Heindrick Vedder respectively. They are two of the most attractive screen children we have seen in some time, and do some very real and very clever acting.

"THE LOVE CHARM"

WANDA HAWLEY has not fared overwell in the matter of screen vehicles of late, but Harvey O'Higgins' "The Love Charm" supplies her with a good comedy. Miss Hawley is, moreover, given an excellent array of players for her supporting cast. Sylvia Ashton is seen as the dieting aunt, Mae Busch as the jealous cousin, Carrie Wood as the house-keeper, Warner Baxter as the hero, and Dick Rosson as the hero's brother.

Ruth Sheldon is invited by her aunt to live with her and her daughter on the death of the former's mother. Ruth has been reading of love charms in a magazine. It seems that if one can in some way suggest a man's mother to him, he immediately falls violently in love with you. Ruth decided to do that when she falls in love with the catch of the town, for whom her cousin, Hattie, is angling.

She finds that the charm works like a miracle, but Hattie discovers it, too, and they force her to disgust him. Consequently, she becomes a hilarious hoyden and tells him he's an old fossil. That gives him something to think about, and when Hattie and her mother come along for their final baiting, they find he's become somewhat rejuvenated. At the crucial moment he produces Ruth from behind a screen and introduces her as his fiancee, thereby giving Hattie and her mother something to think about.

Sylvia Ashton shines out in this picture for her playing of the aunt. One scene in particular—when Ruth walks across a room behind a screen, giving auntie the creeps—gives Miss Ashton unlimited opportunities for comedy work. Mae Busch again gives a worthwhile performance as the designing Hattie. Miss Busch is so attractive and has such verve that it is sometimes difficult to regard her in the light of a villainess. She is, however, always cast for such parts.

CAMERA CLICKS.

BULL MONTANA will be seen in the role of Richelieu in Max Linder's burlesque of "The Three Musketeers," now under way in Hollywood. . . . James Cruze will start the direction for Paramount Pictures of "Is Matrimony a Failure?" in which T. Roy Barnes will play the Leo Ditrichstein role, Walter Hiers will handle the comedy end, while Lila Lee will be the leading lady. . . Mary MacLaren has been chosen to play the leading role opposite Wallace Reid in "Across the Continent." This was the part formerly assigned to Edith Roberts. Miss Roberts was already signed up for another production and was unable to accept. . . . Richard Barthelmess and his company will be on hand in Providence on January 2 to give Mary Hay (Mrs. Richard Barthelmess) a good sendoff when she stages her return behind the footlights in the musical comedy, "Marjolaine," formerly seen as a straight play, "Pomander Walk." . . . Cecil DeMille will step right into harness when he returns from Europe. He has already chosen Leatrice Joy for the leading role in the filming of the Alice Duer Miller story, "Manslaughter," which he will begin as soon as he reaches Hollywood. It will be, he declares, his most elaborate production.

NEW ARMY OVERCOAT STYLES ANNOUNCED

The overcoat in one style will be a high standing collar with shoulder straps. Another style will have a collar that can be buttoned up to form a high standing collar or can be rolled back to form a low collar.

HEGGIE CREATES SENSATION IN NEW ROLE

English Actor Has Won Boston by Excellent Work at Selwyn Theatre

O. P. Heggie has created something of a sensation in the role of Samuel Stillbottle at the Selwyn Theatre, where he returned to Boston Monday as the featured player of Ian Hay's comedy, "Happy Go Lucky."

Too much praise cannot be heaped upon Heggie's head for his splendid, interesting and amusing characterization, one that ranks alongside that of Warfield's "Music Master" and Cyril Maude's "Grumpy."

Heggie was last seen in Boston as Androcles in Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion." He also appeared in "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife." His first appearance in America was with Ellen Terry back in 1907 and he has been much in this country since that time.

He was for several years associated with the productions of Charles Frohman and George Tyler and more recently has supported Frances Starr, Laurette Taylor, Otis Skinner and other stars.

Heggie is a personal friend of Major Ian Hay, who wrote "Happy Go Lucky," and made a trip to England to consult with the writer regarding his personal opinion of the character of old Stillbottle. Hay returned the compliment by visiting New York two weeks ago, with the intention of coming to Boston for the opening here, but the illness of his wife caused him to return to London unexpectedly.

Miss Emma Lowe, popular children's story teller, and Radcliffe graduate, will tell stories between the longer numbers. The committee in charge: Mrs. C. B. Wornell, chairman; Mrs. E. A. Linderholm, Miss Alice Sullivan, Miss Helen Abbott, Miss Avis Kingston, Mrs. F. E. Slattery, Mrs. W. F. Coddrington and Miss Elizabeth Hunter.

WIFE COMPLAINANT IN "POCKET SEARCH" CASE

Peter V. Maggio, counsel for Mrs. Lena Dieso, calls attention to the fact that it was Mrs. Dieso who had her husband, Alphonce Dieso, called into the Malden Court for assault and battery, not the husband who had his wife arrested for searching his pockets. Attorney Maggio further adds that the husband was found guilty of assault and battery by Judge Bruce. Dieso's defence, that he struck his wife because she searched his pockets, had no effect with the court, which ruled that such was not justification of assault, and added comment at length on the right of wives to search their husbands' pockets.

A DEFENSIVE PROGRAM FOR THE UNITED STATES

First, a navy equal to that of any power which threatens to attack us, whether that force be a single nation or an alliance of nations.

Second, a sufficient air fleet and a sufficient submarine fleet fully to protect our coasts and prevent the landing of hostile troops, even if our navy should be destroyed in action.

Third, a merchant marine to be used for the development of our commerce in times of peace, and the protection of our commerce in times of war.

Fourth, a military training for our boys in public schools which will both strengthen them physically and enable them, with slight additional preparation, to become a defensive guard if their country should ever be invaded.

Fifth, national universities similar to those at West Point and Annapolis, whose graduates, in addition to a general scientific course, shall acquire a sufficient military education to enable them to be officers in case their country at any time should call them to its defence.

Finally, fortified naval bases from which our fleets could operate to keep the devastation of war far from our own shores.

This is not an offensive program. It is purely a defensive one.

It cannot arouse any opposition from any power which does not contemplate the possibility of attacking us.

When a nation like Japan objects to stationary fortifications it merely objects to preparation for defence against contemplated attack.

And when a nation like England objects to a submarine fleet to patrol and protect our coasts, it objects merely to the effective opposition that would be offered to a descent upon our coasts similar to that which England made in 1814, when she landed her troops on our soil and burned the Capitol at Washington and the White House of the President.

Words are good when backed by deeds and only so, as Roosevelt said, and as Washington said a hundred years before him. Certainly words are not good when they are in direct contradiction to previous deeds and characteristic practices.

Therefore, our people should not be misled by deceitful words and false promises if they have enough education to know the true facts of history, and the confirmed courses which nations like England and Japan have pursued in the past toward their rivals.

Unlike America, France Unwilling to Be Shoved Into Doormat Class

HURRAH for France!

Thank God there is one nation which Great Britain does not wholly dominate and whose Government she does not entirely control in her own selfish interests.

Three cheers for courageous, independent, self-respecting little France with a population less than half of ours and a territory less than a fifth of ours, but with a spirit as indomitable, as inspiring, as glorious as the great American spirit of ours—USED TO BE.

Good for France, whose representatives are not marionettes worked on the financial wires of the international bankers, but genuine patriotic statesmen who think more of their country and of their people than they do of all the campaign contributions the international bankers have provided in the past or have promised to provide in the future.

Vive la France! May she live long among nations and may her valor and her love of liberty and her patriotism and her shrewd sound sense increase as these essential qualities in other once independent nations diminish so that the world shall not altogether become a doormat for Great Britain to wipe her feet upon.

France knows England, but we—although we have had two wars with her, although she has swept our merchant marine off the seas, although she tried to destroy us during our Civil War, when we were struggling for very existence; although she has allied herself with our enemies and then lied about it and then been proved to have lied about it—WE do not know her, and if we depend upon our innocent, gullible statesmen at Washington never will know her.

France knows that there is not any suggestion of genuine disarmament at the present conference at Washington, nor has there been, nor will there be. There is only talk of other nations than England ceasing to arm in a way which might be effective against England and which might threaten England's complete supremacy on the seas. There is only talk of those other nations "disarming" in a way to make protection of their coasts and their possession impossible and resistance to attack ineffective in case England should at any time desire to discipline those nations.

France knows that England possesses twice or three times the available fleet of any other nation under the proposed proportion of naval allotment, because England has ten times the merchant marine of any other nation and because she so builds and subsidizes and utilizes her merchant marine as to give her stupendous forces in ships and men the moment war is declared and her merchant ships are transformed into battle cruisers.

France knows, too, that the strength of the actual battle fleet of England is the strength of the battle fleets of England and Japan combined—that England has always put the lie in alliance, that she lied before about her secret alliance with Japan, but that the alliance did exist and was proved to exist, and that a secret separate alliance does NOW exist between England and Japan, no matter how much England may lie about it nor how many soft and simple statesmen at Washington may be deceived by her diplomatic falsehoods.

France knows that fortifications are merely protective armaments, not aggressive armaments, and that submarines are protective and defensive armaments, and when England and Japan want to deny to other nations the right to build fortifications and submarines they want to deny to other nations the right to protect themselves whenever England and Japan in secret alliance shall decide to dominate not only the seas but the lands of the world as well.

France knows that the international bankers who run our Government are not really international bankers, but British bankers—that they were acknowledged and ACCREDITED agents of England during the war, and that they are actual agents of England today, although not openly acknowledged nor publicly accredited.

France knows that the various proposals of America at the conference are really the proposals of England made through the international bankers and communicated by the international bankers to the statesmen at Washington, whom they own and operate and include among their tangible assets when they balance their books every night.

France knows that whatever is to be done at the Washington conclave each day is decided upon by Root and Balfour in private conference every previous night, and that whatever Mr. Balfour decides in the interests of England and Mr. Root decides in the interest of the international bankers our super-statesmen advance next day as the proposals of America—and that then these proposals by way of camouflage and strategy are vigorously opposed by Japan, and, after much apparent deliberation and pretended hesitation, are reluctantly approved by England.

France knows that there is no use of her remaining at a conference where England runs Japan through a secret alliance and where England runs the United States through the international bankers, and where England, therefore, has three votes to France's one.

So Briand preserves his self-respect and the prestige of his nation by returning to France and by holding out in his own fine, brave country for the rights and liberties of his patriotic people.

France knows, finally, and we ourselves are beginning to know, that America is getting into the doormat class as far as England is concerned, and that there appear to be, after all, some reasons and uses for the abundant whiskers of our excelsior-stuffed statesmen, because appended to almost every perfect doormat there is an especially bristly brush box upon which particularly important and circumspect visitors give their feet an additional wipe before standing proudly upon the doormat and haughtily condescending to enter the humble premises.

And rest assured, good upstanding Americans—those of you who are left—that wherever politics has provided a national doormat and nature has created a human foot-wiper, able and arrogant John Bull takes full advantage of the opportunities they afford.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Christmas Fund Thanks

In behalf of the 44,000 impoverished men, women and children of Greater Boston who received a substantial dinner on Christmas Day through the medium of the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, this newspaper wishes to thank every person and organization that made this vast undertaking possible.

The Boston American desires to thank every individual who contributed money to the fund, regardless of the amount. It also desires to thank the hundreds of good men, women and children who volunteered their services in order that other persons less fortunate might have a happy Christmas.

From the viewpoint of the number fed, this year's fund was more successful than that of any previous year since its inauguration, eight years ago. This was due in a large part to the wonderful co-operation that the Christmas Fund Editor received from outsiders, and thanks are extended to each of them for the spirit displayed in helping the destitute.

LOOK YOURSELF OVER

When a little fellow tries to sell you a paper on the street, he should not be spoken to gruffly.

He is trying to make an honest living; he is a little business man and you should treat him as a business man.

Why do you usually speak to him so crossly?

Why keep all your smiles and your good nature for your social clique?

You say—"the lad is tough," but is this not largely due to the treatment he receives from those who have more than he has?

You more often treat him as a "pest, and so do other men, and he grows up to be a "pest" in more than one way. He has always been treated as a scamp and a scallawag, an urchin who is tough.

Can you blame him for giving as good or as bad as he receives?

It is easy to get into the habit of treating those who are shabbily dressed as if they were inferiors, particularly if you are not nice and fine yourself.

Defends Girls of Today

Editor Boston American:

For some time past I have been reading about the "awful morals of the girls of to-day" and "the placing of the blame on the mother." I'm tired of all this sort of thing and I raise my voice in protest.

There is a clamor for the sweet woman of yesterday and a denunciation of the emancipated woman. I don't think that in our mother's day the girls (from what I've heard) were half as sound morally and physically as they are today—taken as a whole. I remember coming across an old magazine in my grandmother's attic a few years ago and being fascinated by a headline, "What Should We Do With Our Daughters?" The date on it was something like 1884.

Young persons want amusement. It is natural for a girl to want to know young men and vice versa. Why not provide places where they can meet and where they can dance and otherwise enjoy themselvs?

Just as much should be demanded of the man as the woman. That old saw that a man must sow his wild oats is out of date. Girls have wanted to do the same, but have been held in check by training and example. Men should be taught the same things. D. T.

NATURALLY!

Ethel—She swears she's never been kissed.

Clara—Maybe that's why she swears.

Join the Peter-Pantheists

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

HAVE you joined the International Society of Peter-Pantheists?

Come in when you can—if you can! And bring in your friends by beneficent contagion of Peter-Pantheism. No matter how orthodox you are in your other religious affiliations, no matter how purely pagan you may be, you will feel at home and happy in this faith and practice.

This is no secret order to rival the Komick Ku Kluxers, but is as open in its principle and purpose as in its membership. It was founded by the writer, years ago, soon after he saw Barrie's elfin play, Peter Pan.

Your initiation fee is the honest, hearty laugh of a child, and your dues are to be paid in daily proof that you retain the childlike spirit.

You will remember that the quaint little Peter Pan, who ran away from home at the ripe age of one day, proclaimed himself the spirit of Eternal Youth.

Now you know what we mean by the playfully invented word, Peter Pantheism. Just Youth, Eternal Youth! Don't you want to elect yourself to spiritual membership in such a world-wide unorganized association?

Don't you wish to be beloved of the gods and to die young—at any age? You will find a blessed company in that crowd of the invincibly youthful.

Recently we had the privilege of attending the birthday party of another young-old friend. She is eighty-five and incurably youthful.

Last year she received a diploma from Harvard with the title of M. E.—Master of Education. This year she is taking still another course at Harvard, to further her studies in the science and art of Education!

It happens that at this party there was present a fellow-celebrant who had reached her seventy-fifth birthday anniversary, and in precisely the same spirit of Eternal Youth.

It was an inspiration to have the privilege of close contact with these splendid persons, so advanced in years and so radiantly young in mind and spirit.

One could not superficially compliment them upon the preservation of their faculties, because that would have been patronizing presumptuousness and an irreverent insult to Peter-Pantheism. But they happen to be physically well and robust.

In Monroe county, Pa., an association of octogenarians lately met in annual convention. There were 1,678 years represented in that gathering. The president, Edwin Gearhart, aged eighty-nine, made a stirring speech.

Listen, ye fearful young calamity howlers! He said that those who felt that the world is going to the bow-wows were all wrong. The good old days could not compare with the present days!

Whatever your own opinion on this score, you must agree that it is just this spirit of Eternal Youth, of unconquerable optimism—accompanied by vision and work, which is the salvation of the individual and the hope of the race.

Come, then, and win your own membership in the ranks of the universal Peter-Pantheists.

Join the ever-youthful enthusiastic workers of the world, who make man's dreams come true.

Santa Ignored German Kiddies

BERLIN, Dec. 28. — Germany faced a cheerless Christmas.

Germany has, not without reason, been known as the "home" and the "workshop" of Santa Claus. Here is where he filled Christmas joys to the Christian children all over the world.

This year Santa Claus was sad in his "home"—sad because he distributed toys and toys in other lands with more or less lavish hands, but for the kiddies in his own "workshop"—German—there was little.

The shelves of that workshop were bare. They remind one of Mother's Goose's cupboard. Santa Claus' bag for the German children was conspicuous chiefly for its voids. There were three foes of Santa Claus in Germany this year—the profiteer, the low German exchange and the much higher prices offered abroad for toys and playthings and goodies from his German workshop.

Contrary to his tradition, Santa Claus has become commercialized. Whether he liked it or not, in the very nature of things the product of the German toy factories gravitated abroad where higher prices were offered than could Germans with the paper marks afford to pay. Then, too, Germany needs money with which to pay reparation, and the toyshop workers of Santa Claus had to do their part to help make happy the kiddies in the former enemy countries. That meant sacrifice at home.
